West plans to shut off oil valves

LONDON — Faced with the prospect of a potentially disastrous energy gap in the mid-eighties, Western energy ministers from 19 countries will agree in Paris next week to freeze their imports of oil.

Their imports are currently running at about 24 million barrels a day. The plan they will adopt will limit imports in 1985 — the key year in the threatened crisis — to 25 million barrels.

The ministers will be rubber-stamping a recommendation arising from a secret meeting of officials of the International Energy Agency (IEA) in Paris at the beginning of July.

The officials reviewed the projections worked out by the OECE (Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development) and other bodies and decided they were realistic enough to demand prompt action.

Even at a modest rate of growth, the West's demands threaten to rise to 35 million barrels a day in imports from OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) in 1985. Demands from other countries would probably add another 10 million barrels to that figure.

OPEC and other oil producers might be capable of expanding production to that level, but for a variety of reasons it is unlikely that they would.

One reason is that conservation minded oil states will not want to see their principal asset run dry by the end of the century. Another is that they will want to keep prices high by controlling supply at a time of high demand.

If Western nations are to hunt their dangerous dependence on imported oil, they will have to develop other energy resources.

With that in mind, the energy ministers — who meet in Paris Oct. 5 and 6 — will sign seven agreements on research and development.

At the moment, there is what a senior IEH official earlier this month called a disquieting trend for Western oil imports to rise despite concerted energy savings programs.

Only three countries - Britain, France and Japan — are having much success with their programs. Among the 24 OECD countries generally there was a 6 per cent increase in oil imports last year.

In the United States, the world's major oil importer, President Carter's energy saving program is in danger of being curtailed in the Senate.

However, Western consumption has been held back sufficiently — largely as a result of recession — to prevent OPEC from implementing to the full the price increase which the majority of members agreed at the end of last year.

Production by the North Sea oil fields and the Alaskan north slope also has had its impact in "a situation that produced an oil glut in the West."

Next week's pronouncements by the Western energy ministers will serve as a warning to OPEC militants not to attempt to push up prices steeply, thus worsening the economic stagnation in the West.

OPEC ministers meet again in Caracas, Venezuela, on Dec. 20. There are already reports that a number of them will press for a 10 per cent increase in the standard oil price.

Romance blooms late

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Connie Shaw, 94, and Irma Van Campernolle, 81, say it's never too late for romance.

The couple was married Monday at the convalescent hospital where they have been living. Shaw said he wanted to get married because "I just want to go ahead with my life."

For their honeymoon, the hospital sent them out to a Las Vegas Strip resort for a couple of days. Since they both are confined to wheelchairs, a nurse accompanied them.

Canal guard tough chore

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said today the United States cannot prevent the Panama Canal from being sabotaged and would need up to 100,000 troops to counter a major attack on the waterway.

And Defense Secretary Harold Brown, appearing with the general before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, disclosed that, in time of war, belligerent ships would be permitted to transit the canal under its neutrality provisions.

The two men endorsed the canal treaties today before the panel, but, under questioning by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, Gen. Brown acknowledged:

"Could we prevent an act of sabotage? No. This could disrupt the operations of the canal but for a short period of time."

He added that in the "worst case" scenario of an attack on the canal a typical "schoolbook" response would call for 100,000 U.S. troops to defend the waterway.

After disclosing the information about belligerent ship passage through the canal, Secretary Brown cautioned, however, that the treaties only guarantee passage through the canal. "They don't guarantee it (passage) to the canal."

The secretary said the United States would try to prevent enemy ships from reaching the canal, noting that "the last place we would want to sink a ship is in the canal."

Lt. Gen. D.P. McAuliffe, leader of the U.S. Southern Command, also told the panel he believed the proposed treaties "considerably enhanced" the U.S. ability to defend the canal because of military cooperation between the United States and Panama.

"The U.S. primary defense responsibility and the presence of U.S. military forces in Panama, together with the provisions of the neutrality guarantee, adequately protect the security interest of the United States," he said.

"When these factors are combined with a cooperative defense effort by the government of Panama and its armed forces, they even more adequately provide for the security interests of the United States," McAuliffe said.

He said even today — with canal defense as complete as the United States can make it — he would need to call on outside reinforcements to counter a major external threat.

Panama isthmus generates debate since discovery

By DAVE MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you think controversy over the Panama Canal is a recent occurrence, think again. The narrow Central American isthmus has generated debate since it was discovered by Spanish explorers in the early 1600's.

This was the message Monday of College of Southern Idaho History Professor Jim Gentry, who spoke to the Twin Falls County Republican Women's Club on history of the canal.

Gentry noted construction of a canal had been proposed by several governments. A French company began construction in 1881, but dissolved in bankruptcy in 1889.

The American government — aware of a canal's possibilities since the California gold rush revealed the need for a shorter route to the West Coast — then began negotiations with the government of Colombia, which controlled the land that is today Panama.

During the administration of President Teddy Roosevelt, "Panamanian rebels came to New York looking for arms and money," Gentry said. "Panama had not been particularly happy with Colombia and had led revolutions more than once in the past."

Roosevelt, who Gentry said saw the canal as "an indispensible path to the global destiny of the United States," did not promise aid for a revolution, "but he didn't say he wouldn't either. He left it sufficiently vague."

Shortly after a revolution broke out in Panama, the United States stationed a gunboat off the Panamanian coast to prevent Colombia from suppressing the rebels. "On Nov. 4, 1903, Panama declared its independence," Gentry said. "On Nov. 6 we recognized the new government of Panama."

Following the revolution, a canal treaty favorable to the United States was signed by both countries. Because of continued Colombian objections to United States actions a treaty was signed with that country in 1922, in which the United States gave Colombia $25 million. Colombia had claimed the United States had a large role in staging the Panamanian revolution, Gentry said, and with the 1922 treaty "we confessed we did that."

Gentry, who said he had yet to make up his own mind on supporting the Carter administration's canal treaty, said the new negotiations were a United States declaration that "we no longer hold any territory in Latin America." Adding American presence in the canal zone "is a sore point" in Latin America, Gentry said one of the main foreign policy questions surrounding the canal is "how long can you maintain anything by force?"

Gentry noted the Soviet Union is having increasing difficulty maintaining its hold over Eastern Europe, a control held by armed force.

Gentry said the canal is very important to the United States, and added the U.S. has spent a lot of money there. But the question, he said, "is how best do we hold it. The Joint Chiefs of Staff feel it can be best controlled in Panamanian hands. If Panama controls it, Panama will have a vested interest in preventing guerrilla war."

Movie crews back to Sun Valley

SUN VALLEY — Movie cameras and production crews will return here this week to prepare for filming two more episodes of the television movie "Stedman."

The original pilot movie was filmed in the area last February and aired in May on national television with the title "The Deadly Triangle."

Casting crews for Columbia Pictures Television are scheduled to arrive at the Sun Valley Lodge Wednesday and begin casting locally for people to fill small roles, according to producer Bob Stambler.

About 12 parts with lines will be cast among locals and numerous parts for extras, Stambler said.

"We hope to bring as much to the economy as we did the last time we were there," the producer said.

An estimated quarter million dollars was pumped into the local economy last winter when Columbia spent a month filming in the area.

Stock mutilations found near Stanley

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

STANLEY — Residents in this mountain town are wondering if a bloody and mysterious series of animal mutilations which occurred in southeastern Idaho in 1975 have resurfaced here in the Sawtooth basin.

Stanley-area residents have reported four apparent animal mutilations between early July and mid-September. As in the 1975 mutilation cases, the animals' eyes, ears, tongues and noses have been removed and in some instances internal organs also.

The most recent incident occurred Sept. 18 when U.S. Forest Service fire fighters discovered a white-faced yearling calf, owned by Mark Stark, Challis, lying on its side on Cow Camp Road across from Hanna Creek about 8 miles west of Stanley, according to Custer County Sheriff Sid Teuscher.

The cow had been mutilated by cutting off the left ear, removing the tongue, and skinning the left side of the nose, Teuscher said.

Also, the left side of the animal was skinned with the ribs showing and the hide missing. The stomach had been opened and internal organs appeared to be missing, according to the sheriff.

An earlier incident was discovered Sept. 13, when a horse was found dead next to a salt lick in a pasture 15 miles south of Stanley at Champion Creek, Teuscher reported. This gelding, owned by Jerry Banta, Clayton, was found on its side with its ear severed, the left eye removed and its nose skinned.

The animal's owner reportedly said the gelding still had hay or grass in its mouth and blood was pooled around the carcass when he found it.

This incident is the only one involving a horse, but earlier in the summer, around July 6, sheriff's officials report two similar cow mutilations occurred in the area. The Custer County Sheriff's office is conducting an investigation with the help of state police officials and officials admit they wish to keep the mutilations and the investigation as low-profile as possible, in order not to cause an unnecessary scare among area residents. But some residents are already concerned and worried.

Mrs. Stark commented about the calf mutilation; "It just makes you wonder. We'd heard about the mutilations down in Bingham and Bannock (counties) and thought it could have been some kind of animal, but after Mark saw the calf, he said no animal could have done that, and it's kind of scary."

Authorities suspect the animals were brought down by darts or tranquilizers and then mutilated, although they admit they have no firm clues as to who or what killed the animals or why.

The mutilations resemble earlier reports from southeastern Idaho in 1975 when 34 animals were mutilated. The majority were found with missing sex organs, ears, tongues and eyes.

At the time, Fremont County reportedly suffered the highest number of mutilations, including 21 cows and one horse.

Custer County Deputy Sheriff Carl Ellis, Stanley, reported previously, only one mutilation had occurred in late 1974, prior to the rash of incidents in Fremont County and surrounding areas.

Things were quiet, Ellis said, until the recent killings.

Unneeded hospital beds may go

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A plan to eliminate 100,000 unnecessary hospital beds and regulate the number of babies born in hospitals by 1984 has been issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It also would set numerical standards for open-heart surgery and hospital purchase of radiation treatment units, and aim for an average 80 per cent hospital occupancy rate.

The proposed guidelines represent a key step toward national health planning under the 1974 National Health Planning and Resources Development Act. Final standards expected early next year would allow six years' phase-in.

Although the American Hospital Association declined comment, it has taken the position during preparation of the guidelines that health planning is a grass roots procedure and that HEW is trying to dictate a national mandate with little local flexibility.

AHA will have a formal comment on the proposal later, a spokeswoman said.

Favorable comment came from Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., members of a Senate committee with jurisdiction over health legislation.

"For too long health planners have spoken in generalities. We believe the time has come to set numerical standards for many health care services," they said in a letter to HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

A Senate subcommittee hearing on national health planning is set for Oct. 7.

The standards are intended for use by 205 local health systems agencies in planning the allocation of area hospital beds and other health resources.

"The guidelines will help put the brakes on construction of new hospital bed space and high cost specialty services, such as open heart surgery and computerized X-ray scanning," Califano said in a statement.

The goal is a reduction in the supply of nonfederal hospital beds from 4.5 beds per thousand persons to 4 beds per thousand by 1984 and eventually to 3.7 beds per thousand.

Although some bed expansion might be allowed for population growth or other unusual circumstances, the net result would be elimination of 100,000 beds, HEW officials told a news conference Monday.

The guidelines cite "documented evidence ...that the nation has an excessive supply of hospital beds," with 970,648 non-federal hospital beds last year.

Another of the initial proposed standards — others will follow — says hospital obstetrical units in metropolitan areas should handle at least 2,000 deliveries of babies a year and rural units 500 babies a year.

"The experience of many obstetrical departments indicates that more than 2,000 deliveries are generally required to maintain a consistently high standard of ordinary obstetrical care and a reasonable economic operation," HEW said. "Below 500 deliveries, the quality of care and efficiency are decreased significantly."

Only 16 of the 205 health service areas blanketing the country now meet the 4 bed per thousand and 80 per cent occupancy rates, HEW said. These areas are in Alabama, Delaware, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

State looks into tie at Blackfoot

BOISE (UPI) — The State Department of Health and Welfare is investigating the relationship between an assistant administrator at State Hospital South and a former Pocatello psychiatrist who did contract work with the institution.

In a story from its Boise bureau, the Lewiston Morning Tribune said today that Richard Bolton of Blackfoot acknowledged that he had a personal and professional relationship with the psychiatrist, Dr. Dean Ackley.

Ackley, who two weeks ago moved his practice to the state of Washington, has received $43,520 in contracts for counseling services at the hospital and more than $165,000 in contracts with the Health and Welfare Department which supervises it, the Tribune said.

Robert W. Glover, chief of the department's Division of Community Rehabilitation, called the relationship "disturbing." He said the department will investigate it further because "it is a potential conflict of interest."

Bolton told the Tribune his outside private practice is limited primarily to referrals from bishops of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Both Bolton and Ackley belong to the church.

Last June 1, the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation purchased $300 in counseling services from Dean Ackley and Associates. Ken Jones, Boise, a spokesman for the agency, said that while the check was made out to Ackley and Associates Bolton actually provided the services.

Bolton acknowledged counseling the patients and receiving the money. He said he worked with Ackley on a couple of other cases during the past year, too.

"I did some work with Dean but it was very informal," Bolton said. "Dean and I have a casual personal and professional relationship. Dean was a man of integrity. He was very careful."

The two clients, one a former patient at Hospital South and the other an employe of the institution, could have been referred to a regional community health center at Pocatello where their treatment could have been conducted without extra cost to the state. Bolton said they were not referred there because of religion.

Bolton said the referrals, both LDS, came from a Mormon bishop. He said it is general practice to refer members of the church to LDS psychotherapists.

"You need to understand LDS culture and its feeling about going outside that culture for help," he said. "LDS bishops are cautious about referring outside. They want to make sure the value systems are consistent."

Under Health and Welfare regulations Bolton was allowed to have a limited private practice on the side. That permission was revoked Aug. 1 by Director Milton Klein when an augid revealed "potential problems" with private practice.

Small nuke device fired

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (UPI) — U.S. scientists detonated an underground nuclear device today which was barely felt off this remote Nevada test site.

A spokesman for the Energy Research and Development Administration said the test was a success and no radiation leaked into the atmosphere.

The device, code-named "Coulommiers," a type of cheese, was detonated at 8 a.m. MDT at the bottom of a vertical shaft 1,738 feet long. There was no explanation for naming the test after a cheese.

A puff of dust swirled up above ground zero when the device was touched off but an ERDA spokesman at an observation point within 10 miles of ground zero said ground movement was very slight.

Observers at the Las Vegas gambling spa 70 miles south of here were unable to feel the blast. Federal officials had warned construction workers in high rise buildings to seek secure footing at blast time because the shock wave might sway tall buildings.

ERDA said in advance the test was weapons-related and would have a yield of between 20 and 150 kilotons, the equivalent of a maximum force of 150,000 tons of TNT.

For several years, U.S. scientists have been working on development of a nuclear device that would be difficult to detect when it was detonated.

Today's lack of ground movement could indicate the yield was at the lower end of the 20 to 150 kiloton range, or that scientists have succeeded in developing a nuclear device that is difficult to detect.

With its announced yield of 20 to 150 kilotons, it was within the 150 kiloton threshold contained in a treaty with Russia which is now being considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Soviet-US relations reach 'slump'

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said today relations between Moscow and Washington had reached a "certain stagnation if not a downright slump" and cited U.S. development of the neutron bomb and the cruise missile among the reasons why.

Gromyko, first of the "superpower" diplomats to address the 1977 U.N. General Assembly, said "the world literally shuddered" at news of the neutron bomb and reiterated that America's cruise missile had thrown a wrench into efforts to reach a new strategic arms limitation agreement.

"Unfortunately," he said, "it has to be stated that recently Soviet-American relations have experienced certain stagnation if not a downright slump."

But as a whole, the address was low-keyed and confined to a restatement of known Soviet positions. In the prepared remarks, Gromyko devoted a single paragraph to Soviet-Chinese relations —quoting Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev as saying Moscow was "prepared to normalize relations with China in accordance with the principles of peaceful coexistence."

Gromyko said the Soviet Union and the United States had agreed some time ago "to a considerable extent" on a new arms limitation agreement based on the 1972 accords, but "subsequently much of what was agreed upon has been called into question — and we were not the ones to do it."

"What is involved here above all," he said, "is the decision of the United States to begin the deployment of a new type of strategic weapons, the so-called cruise missile."

That, Gromyko said, opened "yet another channel for the strategic arms race" and added "It would be naive to think that the other side will passively watch this development."

The principle of the neutron bomb is that it destroys a maximum number of people with a minimum of property damage. Gromyko relegated it to a list of the world's "merciless types of weapons."

"How can one qualify this inhumane weapon as 'humane?'" he asked. He called for a U.N. demand for an end to the production of such "ever new types and systems of weapons."

Gromyko also devoted comparatively little time to what has become the major issue at the new session of the General Assembly — the quest for peace in the Middle East and, toward that end, a reconvening of talks in Geneva.

Russian favors an early reconvening of the Geneva talks "with the participation on an equal footing of all the parties concerned, including representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization," he said.

"But there are some opponents," Gromyko added. "And Israel is the main one. It appears the Israeli statesmen would not bring themselves to climb a step higher, would not bring themselves closer to common sense... "

'Empty' tag on treaty testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's testimony on the Panama Canal treaty was "empty and unconvincing," Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said Monday.

Vance was the first administration witness to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the proposed agreement.

"Mr. Vance's testimony failed to convince me that the security of the United States would be protected," McClure said. "Serious questions were raised during the hearings concerning the Panamanian's interpretation of the treaty.

"It appears that the government of Panama may take the treaty provisions to mean one thing while we in the United States are being told they mean something different," McClure said.

He said he strongly supports the request that the transcripts of the negotiating sessions and the relevant notes, comments and memos used during the negotiations be made public.

Army panel scores cadet hazing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Army panel studying West Point policies today voiced concern over hazing of new cadets and said there should be a lesser punishment than dismissal for such "trivial" lies as hiding liquor in a hair tonic bottle.

The panel, formed in the aftermath of last year's cheating scandal, recommended naming of an advisory committee including — for the first time — civilian members to help formulate policy for the military academy.

An announcement which accompanied release of the panel's report said the Army sent it to the academy superintendent for action "as he deems appropriate."

Some recommendations, such as substituting letter grades for the numerical average that established the "goat" system of having a last man in each class, are already going into effect.

Noting that under a recent Borman commission recommendation there can now be a lesser penalty than dismissal for an honor code infraction, the study group said lying should be redefined to no longer include such things as hiding whiskey in hair tonic bottles or covering a window with a blanket while studying after lights out.

The code states "A cadet will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate those who do," and until recently any violation brought expulsion from West Point.

On the subject of hazing of freshmen, the panel voiced concern over "total and pervasive authority over plebes" by upperclassmen and said the system's possibilities for abuse "represent the greatest potential for future public embarrassment of the Military Academy."

It avoided specific recommendations, but said it views the entire system with "much ambivalence."

The recommended 13-member advisory board would give civilians a formal voice in operation of the academy for the first time. The panel said such a group, which would also include military members, would "improve the academy's accountability to the American people."

It suggested members be drawn from university presidents, corporate executives, educational administrators and other distinguished civilians and that it review academic policy, admission standards and selection of faculty.

The study panel, headed by three generals, was named by the Army to look further into findings of a commission chaired by former astronaut Frank Borman which decided that the way the academy and Honor Code had been administered shared blame for West Point's cheating scandal.

A total of 176 members of the class of 1977 were implicated in cheating on a takehome electronics examination. More than 150 left the academy but most have now been readmitted as a result of Borman commission findings.

The study group said "disillusionment and lack of faith have been engendered by bizarre cases" in which "not enough flexibility was shown in application of the Honor Code in "trivial or totally unintentional offenses."

Suspect arrested in church bombing

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama Attorney General William J. Baxley says the arrest of a former Ku Klux Klansman in the 1963 church bombing that killed four teenage black girls is "just a start" toward prosecution of the case.

Robert Chambliss, 73, Monday became the first person indicted by the Jefferson County Grand Jury in the 14-year-old case that was reopened by Baxley last February.

"It's just a start," Baxley said after Chambliss' arrest. "We've got a long way to go toward getting there."

Shortly after the bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, Chambliss was convicted with two other men for illegal possession of dynamite. But the convictions were overturned on appeal.

Sources close to the investigation said a second person was charged in connection with a racially motivated bombing, but Baxley refused to say if the 1963 blast was involved.

The Atlanta Constitution said in today's editions an indictment was returned against attorney J. B. Stoner of Marietta, Ga., in the 1958 bombing of another black church, the Bethel Baptist Church, in Birmingham. No one was hurt in that blast.

Stoner, contacted at his home, told the Constitution he was innocent and would fight extradition to Alabama. The newspaper said he accused Baxley of "misusing the court system ...(by) getting indictments on something when he knows the statute of limitations has run out."

O'Neill predicts strong energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, after meeting with President Carter, said today Congress will produce a strong energy bill despite a series of Senate setbacks for the administration.

UPI

PRESIDENT CARTER HITS LOBBIES
...fights for energy package

"The House is not set in cement but it's going to be pretty rigid" when the legislation is sent to a conference committee of the two bodies to adjust differences, O'Neill said.

Carter made a rare appearance in the White House press room Monday to rally public — and Senate — opinion against "special interest lobbys," which he said "are seeking to deregulate the price of new natural gas." And he invited Democratic congressional leaders to this morning's breakfast to appeal for support in rejecting oil and gas interest "lobbying pressure" against his program.

Speaking to reporters outside the White House after an hour-long breakfast meeting, O'Neill refused to say, for instance, whether the House conferees would insist on a wellhead tax, which has been defeated in the Senate.

"I don't want to get into what the conferees are going to do," O'Neill said. "I just say we're going to come out with a strong bill."

O'Neill also said Congress probably will send Carter a five-bill energy package, which would allow the president to single out and veto any bill that deregulates natural gas.

O'Neill refused to criticize either the Senate or Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia for the difficulties the energy package has encountered there.

"Don't judge the leadership of the Senate until you see the final package. I have confidence ... Senator Byrd is a fine mechanic," O'Neill said.

Byrd himself dodged reporters on his way back to the Capitol, where he pledged today to keep the natural gas bill before the Senate, through allnight sessions if need be, until work is completed.

Carter said Monday the house had faced "this lobbying pressure and has acted both wisely and courageously to protect the integrity of the basic energy policy" which he has sent to Congress.

"The Senate is now facing the same challenge," said Carter, adding that the oil and gas industry's alternatives would cost the average American family which heats with natural gas an additional $150 a year.

Carter has taken one setback after another from adverse actions on his program in recent days.

With "a great sense of regret and sorrow," Carter formally accepted the resignation of his close friend Bert Lance as budget director and formally designated deputy James T. McIntyre Jr. a fellow Georgian, as acting director.

Carter and his wife then attended an emotional farewell reception in the Executive Office Building, given by Lance and his wife for the Office of Management and Budget staff and key members of Congress and the Cabinet.

Hundreds of people stood in line to say goodbye to the popular Lance who will return to Georgia to unravel his tangled financial affairs.

On another front, the White House announced Carter will have a full schedule in New York Oct. 4 and 5 when he addresses the United Nations General Assembly. He will host two working luncheons and a working dinner for heads of delegations, and hold separate meetings with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and key foreign leaders.

Opportunity Knocks Stop Hair Loss, Grow More Hair

HOUSTON, Texas — If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss. . . . and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done." But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss . . . but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in your family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair-loss-caused-by-sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair . . . now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days, at their risk, if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail and without obligation.

Oil company finance paper held

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., says the Carter administration suppressed a report prepared for federal energy officials, saying oil companies need more money.

Tower distributed copies of a draft of a report for the Federal Energy Administration from a study of the financial shape of 40 major oil companies.

It "has been suppressed," Tower charged. He said he had tried unsuccessfully earlier to learn the results of the study.

The report shows "profits of oil companies are not excessive. To the contrary, it suggests higher profits are necessary," Tower told the Senate Monday.

The draft report said, "Historically, the oil industry has financed exploration and expansion mostly from internally generated cash flow, but the particularly heavy and increasing expenditures in 1973, 1974, 1975 and 1976 have forced heavy outside borrowing and an accelerating increase in debt ratios."

It added, "It appears that a choice may have to be made between allowing higher profits or probably seeing lower capital expenditures for privately financed energy development efforts. The alternative will be increased federal participation in energy development by subsidy or direct operational participation."

Even though the oil companies had "extraordinarily large profit increases in 1973 and 1974," those were chiefly due to the fact the companies' inventory of oil got so much more valuable with price increases, the report said.

The report also traced the "sharp profit decline" of 1975, the "rebound" of 1976, and the parallel sharp increase of costs the companies sutained. Cash flow fell short of capital and exploration expenditures, the report said, and companies turned to outside borrowing to cover the lag.

"The degree to which such large outside borrowing can continue to be obtained without lowered credit ratings ...is uncertain," the report said.

It concluded the companies' return on stockholder equity "is not excessive compared to other manufacturing industries, with the exception of 1974, which was an abnormal year."

Congress rushes anti-porn bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is rushing to make child pornography a federal offense, rolling over warnings from lawyer members that it may be playing into the hands of smut dealers by passing unconstitutional bills.

A measure passed Monday by the House on a lopsided 375-12 vote would order stiff prison terms and fines for anyone producing or distributing pornographic material involving children under 16.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., warned the bill would invite court challenges that might be sustained for failure to meet the test of First Amendment rights of free speech.

The provisions were included as part of an overall bill extending through Sept. 30, 1982, the child abuse act which covered only physical abuse when it was first enacted in 1974.

"Sexual exploitation" of children was added to the measure which carries penalties of up to 20 years in prison and or a fine of $50,000 for producers of child pornography. Distributors of such material could get up to 15 years in prison and or a fine of $25,000.

Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich., who wrote the pornography language, said extensive legislative hearings on the proposal in which expert legal witnesses testified convinced him the bill would stand up in a court test.

Conyers, arguing against it only a few hours after his Judiciary subcommittee approved a different child pornography measure Monday, said, "What we are asked to do here is the reverse of our intention."

The Conyers' committee bill would set a jail sentence of up to 10 years and or a fine of up to $10,000 for producers of child pornography, but does not include distributors which Conyers said would expose the overall measure to a constitutional test.

Georgian improving

MARIETTA, Ga. (UPI) — Former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox' health is improving, his doctors said, although he remained in guarded condition today recovering from a heart attack Sunday.

A hospital spokesman said Maddox, who will be 62 on Friday, was conscious and resting comfortably at Urban Medical Hospital. However, he is not allowed visitors or telephone calls. He was admitted Sunday night in critical condition.

Maddox, who also ran in 1976 as the American Independent party presidential candidate, became a national figure when he brandished a pistol to chase blacks from his fried chicken restaurant in 1964. He later leased the "Pickrick" restaurant rather than integrate it, and it eventually closed.

An edited version of American Dream

If you are a middle income taxpayer earning $10,000 to $20,000, you probably thought you were already paying more than your fair share of taxes.

But a recent Internal Revenue Service study and a second, private study conclude the tax burden on middle income Americans is going higher, higher, higher.

Americans who earned $15,898 or more last year paid out 72 per cent of all the taxes in the country.

In 1970, they paid only 68 per cent of the total bill.

The top 25 per cent of the wage earners soon will pay 75 cents of every tax dollar collected in the country.

When those workers with incomes of $10,000 a year or more are added to the model, they paid 92 per cent of all the taxes in the country.

Looked at another way, that means the 50 per cent of the population which earns less than $9,000 a year paid only seven per cent of the nation's total tax bill.

Seven years ago, the 50 per cent of the workers earning less than $9,000 paid 11 per cent of the total.

What's happening?

The answer seems simple. The top 50 per cent of the wage earners are paying the bills for the bottom 50 per cent.

These figures suggest the shape of the American society in years to come. They suggest that, like it or not, we are heading for a day when the government, through its tax laws, redistributes wealth.

While the 50 per cent of the wage earners who are only paying seven per cent of the taxes undoubtedly rejoice at their good fortune, the middle class wage earners cannot help but feel frustrated.

The American Dream has been edited for them.

As part of their quest for a good life for their family the government now asks that they first provide a better life for their poorer neighbors.

Go get 'em, Freddie Laker

Freddie Laker, go get 'em.

Yesterday, Laker was the first passenger to disembark from the historic Skytrain airliner connecting London and New York.

The Skytrain, offering no hot meals, no advance reservations and limitations on luggage, shuttled 271 passengers from London to New York for the ridiculously low price of $103 each.

And the flight made a profit.

For six years Freddie Laker fought Pan Am, TWA and British Airways in an effort to get his 'no-frills' transatlantic flights off the ground.

Monday he did it, and the airline industry is the better for it.

Freddie Laker showed the world he could run an airline and make a profit charging less than half what the big boys charge for a ticket.

For years, airline giants complained Laker's Skytrain unfairly undercut thier business which is regulated by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

But only last week, the CAB approved dramatically lower fares for transatlantic flights on TWA, Pan Am and British Airways. Apparently, it wasn't the CAB which was against lower air fares.

After gaining U.S. and British approval for the Skytrain service, the airline industry lamely called Laker a 'maverick.'

He's the kind of maverick every industry needs.

He took on a seemingly impregnable monopoly, offered a service to consumers which was highly competitive, and won.

Biko death shakes South Africa

By JOHN F. BURNS
©N.Y. Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — After the event, it is clear that the death of Seven Biko has shaken South Africa more than any single event since the police opened fire at Sharpeville in 1960, killing 72 black demonstrators.

Yet even those most outraged by the young black leader's death are doubtful that it will have more than a marginal impact on the policies of the white minority government that hounded Biko in the last years of his life and presided over his mysterious death in a Pretoria prison cell last Monday night.

Although Biko was the 45th political detainee to die in the hands of the security police, his symbolic importance as the founder of the "black consciousness" movement has aroused more fury among opponents of apartheid than all the other cases together. Even elements of the ruling National party have called privatey for a judicial inquiry into the possibility that he was murdered.

Nonetheless, many who watch the government closely have a despairing sense that nothing much will come of the affair, whatever the findings of the inquest that has been promised by Prime Minister John B. Vorster. On the contrary, there is a widespread foreboding that the Afrikaners who rule this divided land may cling with even greater resolve to their vision of a South Africa ruled by them in perpetuity, to the exclusion of the 18.6 million blacks.

domestic international pressures on the government to abandon its racial policies. Western governments may be less willing to resist demands for an oil embargo and other trade sanctions at the United Nations, and blacks at home, restive since the riots that killed more than 600 last year, may yet renew their rampage.

However, experience suggests that Vorster and his colleagues may react to intensifying pressures not by yielding but by digging in deeper. This eems all the more probable in the current circumstances, when they have just settled on constitutional reforms which they have held up as the ultimate solution to the country's racial dilemma.

The plan, due to go before parliament early next year, holds nothing for blacks beyond the political rights already granted to them in the national government to Asians and those of mixed race, numbering 3.1 million between them, who constitute no threat to the supremacy of the 4.3 million whites.

In an interview with the New York Times last week, Vorster replied with a curt "no" when asked if the plan might be expanded to include the 8.4 million blacks outside the homelands. Moreover, with the Biko affair pressing in on him, he vowed never to cede to pressures for reforms that would prejudice the position of the white minority.

"I am definitely not going to let anybody prescribe to me what I should do and what I should not do," the prime minister said.

Some Afrikaners, pointing to previous occasions in their history when they have ceded to superior power, believe that Vorster's words conceal a recognition that at some point, sooner than invite economic disaster, South Africa will have to come to terms with the world over its internal affairs. But even among those holding this view, the assumption is that Biko's death has advanced only marginally the moment of ultimate accommodation.

If the affair has a more immediate impact, it is likely to be of a limited scope, involving the follow-up on the death itself. Already, legal machinery has been set in train that will be difficult to stop without abandoning the country's claim to a civilized system of law, and Justice Minister James T. Kruger, has promised that "heads may roll" if irregularities are proven.

Those leading the outcry have demanded more. At a gathering at the Johannesburg city hall, Helen Suzman, the government's most outspoken parliamentary opponent, has pledged unremitting efforts to repeal Section 6 of the Terrorism Act, the statute under which Biko was held at the time of his death. Section 6, permitting indefinite detention without trial, has been used in almost all of the cases where detainees have died.

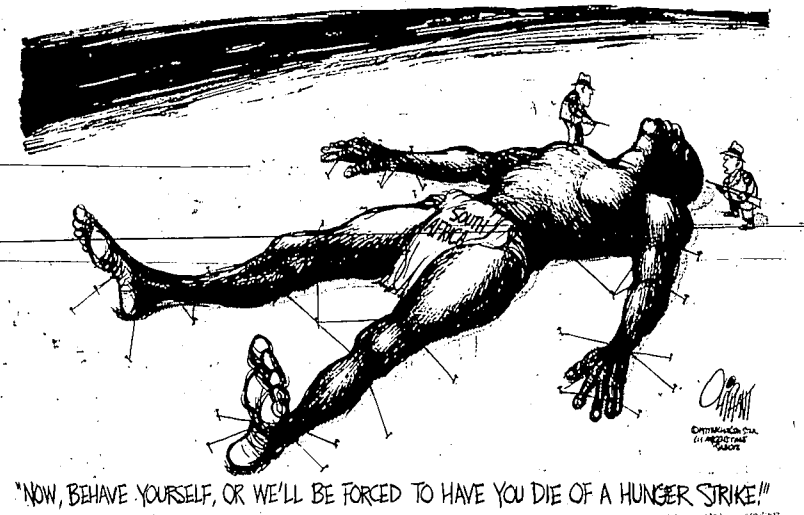

However, on present appearances the government is most unlikely to limit the powers of the police. Faced with a conspicuous lack of success in obtaining convictions against black militants in the courts, it has relied ever more heavily on the network of security laws, including the Terrorism Act, to silence and inhibit opposition.

In the past year alone, several hundred people have been detained without trial, usually for months at a time, and sometimes without interrogation. Biko, center of the youth protest movement, was arrested under the security laws three times in the past year for a total of 137 days. In the last three years, he was acquitted four times of charges involving subversion and defeating the ends of justice.

If the government does constrain the police, it is more likely to be through a tightening of accountability.

The furor over the death could also persuade senior officials to give more serious attention to the black protest movements. Vorster, in the interview, insisted that Biko's importance had been exaggerated. "If you ask any black man on the street who Biko was before he died he wouldn't have been able to tell you," he said, offering a view common among Afrikaner Nationalists.

The same attitude seems to have lain behind Kruger's cavalier remark that the death "leaves me cold," which he subsequently retracted, and the laughter that his comments provoked at a congress of the ruling party. In the end, the government's conviction that in dealing with Biko it was dealing with a minor trouble-maker, rather than the leader of a movement with widespread support among young blacks may be as revealing — and as tragic — as any other feature of the affair.

Reporters face turnabout investigation

© Chicago Sun-Times

I have a funny feeling that this is going to be a very bad year for people who live in glass houses, especially if those people are reporters.

Sex, money and politics are the main ingredients of an agonizing case that has been brewing in Washington, D.C., recently. Washington is not an unusual place for stories about sex, money and politics. Except this time, the participants are members of the press.

The press has pretty much declared open season on the sex lives of public officials and public figures. It is now the sex lives of reporters that are being held up for public scrutiny.

The facts are these:

Laura Foreman, 44, recently admitted that while she was a reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer she became romantically involved with a Pennsylvania state senator, Henry J. Cianfrani, 51.

Her admission came after the Inquirer published a story Aug. 27 stating that Miss Foreman also had accepted about $10,000 worth of gifts from Cianfrani, including a fur coat and jewelry.

While a reporter for the Inquirer, Miss Foreman covered the re-election campaign of Philadelphia Mayor Frank L. Rizzo and the effort by Rizzo forces to gain control of the city's Democratic organization.

Cianfrani was a political associate of Rizzo during the time that Miss Foreman was doing her stories and there was speculation that Rizzo wanted Cianfrani to be the new city Democratic chairman.

Inquirer reporters had complained to their editors about Miss Foreman's association with Cianfrani, but editors now state that no proof was presented to them.

In January, 1977, Miss Foreman left the Inquirer for a job at the Washington Bureau of the New York Times. She did not tell her new employers of her former relationship with Cianfrani nor, apparently, did they ask. She had broken off the relationship in the fall of 1976, and had stopped covering Philadelphia politics.

In August, Miss Foreman was questioned by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as a potential witness in a tax-evasion case the U.S. attorney's office was contemplating against Cianfrani, the Inquirer reported.

Soon after that, the Inquirer came out with its story, headling it: "Inquirer Conflict in Cianfrani Case."

Gene Roberts, executive editor of the Inquirer, stated, "it is contrary to the policy of the Inquirer for reporters or editors to accept gifts from subjects or sources of news stories. It is also policy of the Inquirer that since any relationship or intense personal involvement between a reporter and a subject or news source might be construed as a conflict of interest, the reporter involved should be disqualified from covering that person or subject."

But Miss Foreman was no longer the Inquirer's problem. She was the employe and problem of the New York Times. At first, the New York Times had been "in conformance with the higher ethical standards of the profession."

Soon thereafter, however, Miss Foreman was asked for her resignation, which she submitted against the advice of her attorney. She stated: "I don't believe I have done anything wrong. I may have done something injudicious. Certainly, I did not believe I ever wrote anything for the Inquirer which violated my own professional integrity."

Robert C. McCandless, a respected Washington attorney who defended John Dean, is representing Miss Foreman and told me that he has requested the Times to reinstate Miss Foreman.

The whole mess breaks down into two questions:

— Did Miss Foreman's personal relationship with Cianfrani affect her news stories?

— Does that make any difference?

McCandless' position is that the first question is the essential one. "She has not done anything wrong and there has been no allegation that since she joined the New York Times she has done a damn thing except write very well," he said. "Even at Philadelphia, she never covered state politics; she covered city politics.

"The relationship with Cianfrani is admitted. But as far as her job with the Times goes she has done absolutely nothing wrong. You have to wonder if she had been a man and the senator had been a woman, if the question would have been raised."

A. W. Rosenthal, New York Times executive editor, said this to me:

"I strongly suggested Miss Foreman resign and she did. Her usefulness as a reporter was at an end. She could not cover anything for us anymore without embarrassing herself and the paper. It was a very unhappy thing.

"Whether her relationship affected her writing is not the issue. There is no way of demonstrating that or of ever knowing that. Nor was the issue her personal relationship with this man.

It was the fact she had an affair, accepted gifts and continued to write about him that matters. That was unacceptable."

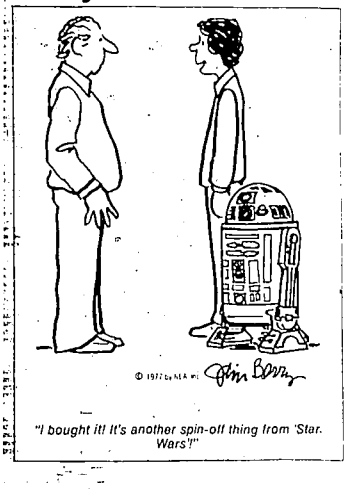

If you think there is some kind of universal agreement in the press as to whether Miss Foreman is wrong or right, you are quite wrong. There are no standards of ethics that all newspapers accept. Many papers don't have clearly defined standards at all.

The Washington Star, which has covered the story at length, stated flatly in a news story: "Laura Foreman is to the New York Times as Bert Lance is to Jimmy Carter."

But some reporters see Miss Foreman as a victim, whose past personal life has nothing to do with her professional one.

"We don't care if she sleeps with the elephants," one Washington reporter was quoted, "as long as she doesn't cover the circus."

CIA connection creates suspicion

WASHINGTON — Carl Bernstein's revelation that 400 members of the press were also working, in some way, for the CIA overseas in the 1950s and 1960s has made every newspaperman who was stationed abroad suspect.

I worked in Paris for 14 years for the International Edition of the Herald Tribune and, ever since the story broke, even I have been asked if I was involved in any overt or covert operations concerning our most famous secret service.

The answer is, "Not to my knowledge." I'm fairly sure of it because the salary the Paris Herald Tribune gave me was way below the prevailing CIA rates for reporters, and I have to believe the chintzy Herald Tribune management was paying me out of its own pocket.

I should have had some suspicions, even in those days, that several of my colleagues were working for somebody beside the papers they pretended to be accredited to.

One American friend was living in an 18-room villa in Vienna, with three servants and a chauffeur. I never could understand it, because the only paper he was working for, at the time, was a weekly magazine published in Terre Haute, Ind.

I once asked him about his elegant lifestyle, and he replied, "The Terre Haute publisher believes its overseas bureau chiefs should live well."

I should have smelled something fishy when he once asked me to take an article he had written back to Paris and hide it in a tree near the American Embassy.

"If that how you file your stories?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied. "It's much faster than sending them over the teletype."

"But the article is on microfilm," I said.

He got angry. "Look, you file your stories the way you want to, but don't tell me how to file mine."

Possibly one of the reasons the CIA never sought to recruit me is that they may have thought I would not make a very good agent.

I recall going to Carlsbad in Czechoslovakia for a film festival in the 1950s. When I returned, I had a visit in my office from two very well-dressed men who said they were from the Dulles Broadcasting Company in Waco, Texas. They told me they were unable to attend the film festival and asked if I would brief them on it.

I said, "Certainly, what do you want to know?"

"How many anti-aircraft guns did you see around the festival hall?"

"None that I can remember," I said.

"There were searchlights at the film festival, but there always are."

"Were there any land mines near your hotel?" the other one asked.

"Beats me," I said, "I din't see anyone step on one."

"How many Soviet divisions did you see?"

"You mean in the films?"

"No, you dummy. Real Soviet divisions with armor."

"Hey, what's that got to do with a film festival?" I asked.

"It's hopeless, Joe," one of them said as he got up.

The other one got up, too. "I told the Company we'd be wasting our time." And they stomped out.

Had it occurred to me I was being tested, I certainly would have been more cooperative. But in those days I really believed there was a Dulles Broadcasting Company in Waco, Texas. Heaven knows I could have used the extra CIA money.

I don't know which of my fellow correspondents worked for the CIA and which didn't. But in the late '40s and '50s I played a lot of poker with them. And I now suspect several of them were more than they said they were. How do I know? Well, some of them used to stay in the hand to the very end, with a pair of twos. It dawned on me just the other day that only a guy on a CIA payroll could afford to do that.

Busy day in UN halls

DONALD JAMIESON
...cites frustration

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States and Israel disagreed over conditions for Middle East peace talks, Egypt's foreign minister was steered away from a possibly awkward encounter with his Israeli counterpart and the Russian waited his turn in the wings.

So it went Monday on the opening day of three weeks of debate at the 1977 U.N. General Assembly — a business that Don Jamieson, Canada's Secretary of State for External Affairs, said had become "a frustrating experience."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had his turn at the podium today — the first of the superpowers to address the new assembly. Gromyko was expected to touch on last week's pledges by Moscow and Washington to abide by the 1972 Strategic Arms Limitation treaty even after it expires Oct. 3.

But the heavy action was outside the assembly chamber — in U. N. hallways and in the privacy of nearby hotel rooms.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance met Monday afternoon with Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and indicated there were problems with Israel's weekend announcement that it agreed to permit Palestinians on a pan-Arab delegation at any new Middle East peace talks.

The problem, said Vance, was that Israel was insisting on "conditions" that "do not accurately reflect our views."

He left no doubt the "conditions" he referred to involved Israel's refusal to let members of the Palestine Liberation Organization on an Arab delegation at reconvened peace talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Vance met later with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and set up another session with his Egyptian counterpart, Ismail Fahmi.

Both Dayan and Fahmi spent much of Monday wandering the halls of the United Nations, talking to various other delegates.

At one point, Fahmi and Dayan almost ran into each other —accidentally. Dayan was chatting with Arthur Goldberg, America's former U.N. ambassador, when Fahmi approached with an aide. Suddenly, the aide spotted Dayan and sharply steered Fahmi from the vicinity.

Vance's remark about Israeli "conditions" dampened hopes that had been building slightly among hundreds of U.N. delegates that a breakthrough toward Middle East talks might be in the offing.

Fahmi said PLO representation among Arabs in Geneva was "mandatory" and said the Israelis were trying to give the "false impression" that they and the Americans were eye to eye on an agreement.

Spanish left suspected in slaying

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — In a new flareup of political violence, suspected left-wing extremists shot and killed a police captain today on the second anniversary of the execution of five urban guerrillas by the Franco regime.

The office of Madrid governor Juan Roson said Florencio Herguedas Carretero, 55, chief of the radio patrol cars of the national security police in Madrid, was found dead in a suburban street at 7:30 a.m. He was shot in the head and back of his neck as he was walking from his home to go to work.

Police sources said the killing bore all the marks of a leftwing urban guerrilla action.

Herguedas was the 10th Spanish policeman shot by political terrorists this year. His killing was apparently part of a campaign of extremist violence aimed at unsettling Spain's frail new democracy.

Last week, right-wing extremists killed one person and injured 15 others in a bomb attack on a Barcelona magazine office. Two left-wing extremists were wounded in gunfights with police who accused them of having prepared a series of bombings against Madrid railway installations.

Herguedas died on the second anniversary of the execution of two Basque separatist guerrillas and three members of a Maoist urban guerrilla group, all of them convicted of murdering policemen.

Lebanon fields quiet

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The battlefields of south Lebanon lapsed back into farmland today under a U.S.-mediated cease-fire that a senior Western diplomat called a "crucial test for Mideast peace."

But in northern Israel, a salvo of rockets fired from Palestinian positions in south Lebanon screamed early today into the border settlement of Rosh Hanikra near the Mediterranean coast, causing no injuries or damages.

An army spokesman said Israeli artillery gunners in the area observed the cease-fire and did not pound the suspected sources of the rockets, and that the rest of the border region also was quiet.

Lebanese rightists backed by Israeli troops and tanks inside Lebanon and joint Palestinian-Lebanese leftist forces ended most of their firing at 10 a.m. Monday (4 a.m. EDT), but scattered exchanges occurred in south Lebanon after the deadline.

"It will take at least 36 to 48 hours to see whether it (the cease-fire) is for keeps," the Western diplomat said in Beirut. "This is a crucial test for Mideast peace.

The war has forced well over 200,000 refugees to flee the fighting in the predominantly agricultural south, but some of them began emerging from boarded-up homes late Monday, a Lebanese reporter in the south said.

A few shops in the southern town of Nabatiyeh, the guerrilla-held former market hub with virtually nothing left to market and almost no one to sell it to, opened their doors early today for the first time in months.

"It's a test for the Carter administration, for the Palestinians, but mostly for Israel. It would be the first real proof for Washington the Israelis want peace."

American and Israeli officials also said the cease-fire ending 10 months of fighting that had intensified in the past 10 days — had taken hold except for a Palestinian salvo of Soviet-made rockets that wounded eight persons in two Israeli towns.

An Israeli military spokesman said Israel pulled back all its troops that had crossed into Lebanon, but a Lebanese reporter in the area said some Israelis remained in a few hill positions just inside Lebanon.

When the dust-covered Israeli soldiers clanked back across the border in U.S.-built armored vehicles, a Christian commander put his arm around an Israeli officer and said:

"We have the assurance the Palestinians will respect the cease-fire ... If not, we have the assurance that the Israeli army will interfere and fight."

A Lebanese reporter in the south said only scattered rocket, shell and machine gun exchanges marred the ceasefire Monday and that the rocky farmland seemed to be at peace again.

Largely the product of intensive U.S. contacts in Jerusalem, Beirut and with Middle East diplomats in Washington, the cease-fire reportedly is based on a peace accord endorsed by the Lebanese government and the Palestine Liberation Organization in late July.

The plan, originally scheduled to take hold in mid-August, was undermined by a sharp escalation of the fighting in the south that culminated in a major Israeli-rightist offensive 11 days ago.

Under the plan, up to 1,200 Lebanese army regulars will enter Palestinian and rightist positions and all but about 300 Palestinians will pull back from the border to allow creation of a demilitarized zone, diplomatic sources said.

The radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine repeatedly has rejected any Palestinian pullback and said Monday "We will not withdraw one inch from our present positions."

With the Front estimated to comprise less than one-fifth of the guerrilla forces, "the question is whether they can make their rejection stick," the Western diplomat said.

Settlement of Rhodesian race war within reach

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A top black nationalist leader says Prime Minister Ian Smith's radical turnaround on black rule means an early settlement of Rhodesia's race war is "not something out of reach."

"I was delightfully surprised," the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, a Congregationalist minister who believes he will be elected head of a black-ruled Zimbabwe (Rhodesia), told UPI Monday.

"We welcome the pronouncements of the prime minister. They are very constructive and they give us all the more reason to believe that a settlement is not something out of reach in the near future," Sithole said.

Smith said Sunday he will allow black guerrillas to join Rhodesia's army after majority rule is installed and might accept the one-man, one-vote system recommended in a U.S.-British peace plan — but only under certain conditions.

Sithole said Smith's remark on universal suffrage is "indicative of the new realism that is taking place.... This gives us a great deal of encouragement that we may yet solve this problem through peaceful means."

But Sithole added that one of the conditions Smith set for universal suffrage is not acceptable to him and the guerrillas fighting a five-year war against the white supremacist regime.

Smith said the one-man, one-vote system — which would give Rhodesia's 6.2 million blacks a heavy advantage over the 275,000 whites — must be coupled with a mechanism insuring that the rights of whites are not ignored by a black-controlled parliament.

"A blocking mechanism is of course not acceptable to the African people," Sithole said, adding the best guarantee for whites would be "mutual trust" fostered by the creation of a society not based on race.

Dutch hunt abducted W. German

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — Heavily armed Dutch police today searched cars with West German license plates and kept watch for an overdue rented yacht in hopes of turning up kidnaped West German industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

Justice Ministry officials said they were searching for a yacht rented by West Germans but not returned the day it was due back. They would not say where or when the boat was rented.

Carbine-carrying police in bullet-proof vests searched cars with West German license plates but reported no arrests. They also are searching for three West German women terrorists, one of them wanted in the shooting and injuring of at least two policemen.

The Dutch search for Schleyer started Sunday after West German officials tipped police that Schleyer might be held by members of the Red Army Faction — the Baader-Meinhof gang — on a boat in Dutch waters.

Evel faces assault charges

EVEL KNIEVEL

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Daredevil motorcyclist Evel Knievel was formally charged by the district attorney's office Monday with felonious assault for allegedly breaking the arm and wrist of a television executive with a baseball bat.

Knievel, free on $1,000 bail after his arrest Sept. 21, was due to be arraigned Wednesday on one felony count of assault with a deadly weapon with force likely to produce great bodily harm.

The 38-year-old stuntman is accused of attacking Sheldon Saltman, 46, vice president of telecommunications at 20th Century-Fox Studios, as the executive was walking to his office last Wednesday.

Saltman, former publicity agent for Knievel, said he spent three months with the stuntman in writing the book about the Knievel's unsuccessful jump of the Snake River in 1974 in a rocket-powered motorcycle.

Judges protected from suits

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (UPI) — Author Norman Dacey's $1 million lawsuit against Superior Court Judge Henry J. Naruk has been thrown out of court because judges are protected from lawsuits.

U.S. District Court Judge Jon O. Newman of Bridgeport said Dacey's suit ran headlong into "the insurmountable obstacle of judicial immunity."

Dacey, author of "How to Avoid Probate," initially sued the Connecticut Bar Association in 1967 claiming a brochure circulated by the group libeled him. He was awarded $60,000 in damages by a Superior Court jury in 1974, but the award later was overturned through an appeal by the bar association.

Dacey filed the lawsuit against Naruk in August, charging the judge violated his civil rights by presiding earlier this year over Dacey's libel case against the bar association.

Posthumous award planned

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — The first posthumous Pied Piper Award by ASCAP, the society of music composers, will go to the late jazz pianist Erroll Garner.

The award will be presented Wednesday to Garner's brother, Vancouver musician Linton Garner, in a ceremony at the Beverly Hilton. The board of directors of the group, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, voted to honor Garner with the organization's sixth Pied Piper award, because of his "unique contributions which left a permanent mark on the world of music," an ASCAP spokesman said.

Pidgeon home from hospital

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Actor Walter Pidgeon went home Monday after 53 days in St. John's Hospital, where he had a brush with death from a blood clot.

Pidgeon, 78, entered the hospital for surgery to remove a clot —formed in his legs by a phlebitis condition and lodged in his brain area. The operation was a success, but as he was recovering several days later a second clot lodged in his lung, threatening his life.

He remained in critical condition in the intensive care unit for several days until the clot was dissolved by anticoagulant drugs.

TV influence used as teen's defense

MIAMI (UPI) — Sitting at the defense table was a 15-year-old boy, but television — its influence on the viewer and its use in the courtroom — is just as much on trial.

Ronald Zamora, accused in shooting an elderly neighbor to death, has pleaded innocent to the crime by reason of temporary insanity caused by "intoxication with television violence." It was believed to be the first time such a defense has been used.

Also at issue is the presence of television and still cameras filming the proceedings in Circuit Judge Paul Baker's courtroom.

RONNEY ZAMORA, 15, ON TRIAL
. . . accused of robbery-slaying

Baker has warned cameramen that their conduct could "make or break" the experiment. They were permitted in the court under a one-year test ordered by the Florida Supreme Court.

As part of his defense, lawyer Ellis Rubin has subpoenaed Telly Savalas, noted for his portrayal of the television detective "Kojak" and his criticism of TV violence.

Baker has agreed to Savalas' appearance, but ruled against Rubin's original plan to introduce testimony on the possible effect of TV violence on children in general.

According to court depositions, Zamora said "Kojak" is his favorite TV show. He said he once asked his father to shave his head so he would look like the detective. His mother said her son would even skip meals rather than miss a favorite show, usually a crime program.

Another celebrity turning out for Monday's opening session was E. Howard Hunt, the former CIA agent and Watergate "plumber." He sat quietly, taking notes on the first day of jury selection for a book on famous trials.

Zamora is charged with killing 83-year-old Elin or Haggart June 4. A co-defendant, Darrell Agrella, also 15, is scheduled to be tried in November.

Deportation hearing set

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Dutch art salesman who admitted conspiracy to "dispose, barter and sell" seven stolen paintings by 17th and 18th century masters has been sentenced to two years in prison.

However, U.S. District Court Judge Warren E. Ferguson Monday postponed the sentence handed Augustinus Petrus Maria Kouwenhoven, 35, pending the outcome of a Nov. 23 deportation hearing.

The judge called deportation from the United States the "worst possible punishment" for someone like Kouwenhoven, who has "had a taste of America and wants to stay."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Douglas Lofgren asked Ferguson for "substantial sanctions" against Kouwenhoven.

"A substantial sentence should be imposed to show that the United States will not become a dumping ground for stolen art," Lofgren said.

The seven paintings, one of them a Rembrandt valued at more than $18,000, were recovered last year in an FBI raid. The paintings were stolen from a Dutch art collector on Aug. 19, 1976.

Kouwenhoven and a second defendant, Peter Johannes Rombouts, 46, admitted the conspiracy charges May 25. Shortly afterward, Rombouts fled the country and returned to Holland, which has no extradition treaty with the United States.

Orginally, the two were charged with conspiracy to smuggle the paintings into the United States and with concealing the art works for sale.

In exchange for their guilty pleas on a single conspiracy count, the two supplied Dutch authorities with the indentities of 12 persons connected with the theft. Two subsequently have been convicted by Dutch courts.

'Show and tell' time

LACRESCENTA, Calif. (UPI) — "Show and tell" at the La Crescenta Elementary School Monday turned into "look and run."

That was the reaction to one 8-year-old boy's offering — a hand grenade.

His teacher notified the principal, who ordered the school evacuated and called the Los Angeles County Sheriff's bomb squad, which removed the grenade.

Water crisis traced

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A two-day water crisis for some 70,000 residents last week — at one point thought to be the work of a saboteur — has been traced to a "one-in-a-million" double contamination.

Dade County officials said Monday investigators blamed the condition on contamination of the water plant by insecticides and a leak of natural gas into well fields.

"It was a million-to-one chance" occurrence, said county environmental official Colin Morrissey.

The contamination from three pesticides was of minimal importance, Morrissey said. It was four elements of organic sulphuric compounds and methane — all usually found in natural gas — that caused the water to smell so bad.

"We believe a break in a gas line or another source of industrial waste was the cause," he said.

Police, health department and environmental officials are still working to determine how the contaminants got into the water system, knocking out service between Thursday and Saturday morning.

Men honored

Selassie's kin 'destitute'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once they were royalty, but now the great-grandchildren of the late Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie are "destitute" refugees looking for a home.

The children, who fled their war-torn homeland and came to New York Saturday, left Sunday for an undisclosed location in this country, where they hope to settle. Their brief stay in New York was spent in a dingy hotel on the city's East Side.

With four cousins, they left their country in July when their mother, the daughter of the crown prince of Ethiopia, died in a prison hospital. Their father, a former governor of an Ethiopian province, is believed to be in an Addis Ababa jail.

The three boys and three girls, ranging in age from 3 to 21, came to the United States after a two-month odyssey took them from Kenya, to West Germany, to Sweden and England.

Like their four cousins who arrived in America earlier, the children hope to find a new home.

The children were met in this country by comedian Joey Adams and his wife, Cindy. Mrs. Adams was a friend of the children's mother.

A friend of the Adams said the children have had a "very rough time" since their great-grandfather was overthrown in a 1974 military coup. She said they were "destitute."

The aging emperor, known as the Lion of Judah, died at 83 in August 1975 while under house arrest.

The Adamses say they hope to raise money for the children who only "want to stay together."

ISU to conduct Shoshone survey

SHOSHONE — KGBL, a student television station at Idaho State University (ISU), Pocatello, will be gathering information Wednesday and Thursday on a historical documentary of Shoshone.

The crew will have headquarters at the Shoshone Library on Main Street and requests voluntary information from Shoshone residents.

Long-time residents of Shoshone are asked to bring old photos and visit the crew to give historical information about the city. All photos will be copied immediately and the original returned to the owner.

The crew has already accomplished some work on the documentary, but needs volunteer information from all interested residents. Production manager in charge will be student James Alexander, ISU.

More information on the documentary can be obtained by calling the Shoshone Library or Mrs. Boyd Alexander, Shoshone, at 886-2110.

NOW eyes women's rights

BOISE (UPI) — Support for the Equal Rights Amendment, the right of women to choose to have an abortion and legislative priorities were the main subjects addressed by the second annual Idaho convention of state chapters of the National Organization for women (NOW) held in Boise over the weekend.

At a press conference following the weekend meetings, Virginia Wolf, state coordinator of the Idaho NOW said the organization now has 80 members statewide in chapters located in Boise, Moscow, Pocatello and Coeur d'Alene. Wolf also said there are other women in Idaho who belong to NOW nationally although not members of the state chapters.

One key resolution passed during Sunday's concluding session set forth four areas of concern that the organization intends to emphasize during the upcoming session of the Idaho Legislature.

In this resolution, Idaho NOW endorsed the "dissolution of marriage" bill that would revise Idaho divorce laws, a displaced homemakers bill, legislation to provide rape crisis care and legislation to protect women from physical abuse by their husbands.

In a separate resolution, the group endorsed the concept of legislation to insure equality in employment, housing and legal rights for all persons "regardless of sexual preference". Currently Idaho has a number of laws that outlaw homosexual or lesbian activities and relationships.

Another resolution related to Idaho politics said that the last session of the Idaho Legislature displayed "minimal interests in the rights of women" and resolved that the organization would only support legislative candidates in 1978 "who will endorse measures that improve the quality of life for women in Idaho."

The conference also took a stand directed against Second District Congressman George Hansen's continuing complaints and recent suit directed against the National Commission for the Observance of International Women's Year.

Hansen has charged that the observances in Idaho and elsewhere have not reflected a cross section of women in the country and that the national organization illegally used federal money to lobby for the Equal Rights Amendment.

The resolution passed by this weekend's Idaho NOW conference thanked the Idaho International Women's Year Coordinating Committee for its "successful efforts in providing Idaho women of diverse backgrounds and geographical areas the opportunity to determine issues of importance to all" and voted to send a copy of the resolution to Hansen.

The conference endorsed the principle of the national NOW organization to impose "economic sanctions" on states that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment. In particular, the sanctions are intended to strike at states like Illinois, Florida, Missouri and Nevada which have major convention centers. The sanctions call upon organizations not to hold conventions in such states or to provide other forms of economic support.

At a press conference following the conference, leaders of the Idaho group said the sanctions would not apply to Idaho because Idaho has ratified the ERA and the Idaho Legislature's vote to rescind that ratification will have no effect in their opinion. The National Women's Commission recently decided not to hold its annual convention in Sun Valley, in part because of the legislative vote against the ERA.

Other resolutions passed by the weekend conference included:

— A protest against the Supreme Court decision granting states the right to deny state Medicaid funds for abortions, the Supreme Court decision to allow public hospitals to refuse to provide abortion service and any effort by Congress to pass the so-called "Hyde Amendment" that would prohibit the use of federal money to pay for abortions.

Hagerman sewer approved by feds

HAGERMAN — A year and a half after voters approved a bond issue to help finance the city's first sewage system, Hagerman City officials have received final government approval so bids can be let.

Audrey Herrington, city clerk, said Thursday plans for the project, estimated to cost about $929,400, were approved by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) last week, with the Farm Home Administration (FHA) okay received Monday.

Mayor Dean Holt, and the city clerk will meet soon with city engineers, Wendell Smith and William Jewell, Montpeller, to finalize plans and specifications.

Herrington said it will be the first part of October before bids can be advertized. They must be advertised for four successive weeks.

Construction work could begin in November, she said, but it will depend upon what contractor is awarded the contract and the weather.

Hagerman voters overwhelmingly approved a $450,000 bond issue Feb. 24, 1976. Federal funds will finance 75 per cent of the treatment facilities, with the state paying 15 per cent, leaving the city to pay the remaining 10 per cent of the $618,400 for the treatment facilities.

The city also must pay for the cost of the collection system, estimated at $248,000 and the lagoon site, expected to cost $63,000.

In addition to the construction of a sewage system, the overall project will include a small water improvement, estimated at about $36,000.

Hagerman's domestic water supply comes from rim rock springs and is piped directly to the city with some chlorination before it enters the water distribution lines.

Pachyderms fed up with vandals

MOSCOW (UPI) — The elephants at Duzhanbe Zoo have had it with vandals and are fighting back.

A. Toshev, the director of the zoo in Central Asia, says they even had to put up a sign to warn onlookers: "Careful. The elephants throw stones."

"It didn't help," Toshev told the newspaper Communist Tadzhikistana. "They throw stones at the elephants and the elephants return them. Sometimes innocent people are victims of elephants' revenge."

Toshev said his workers don't have time to watch everybody and that vandalism is running rampant.

"They throw stones, sticks, cigarettes, and bottles," he said. "Some people even stick their heads into the cages."

A couple of vandals made off with a boa constrictor and somebody else nabbed a sheep.

On one afternoon, observers watched one man poking monkeys with a piece of wire. Another was pinching a bison's ear and a third was showing a monkey how to light matches.

And everybody wants to feed the animals.

Some merely toss in sunflower seeds, but the mood has turned grim lately.

"There are some people who put into the bread and cookies needles, pieces of glass or snuff," the newspaper said.

But the animals aren't taking all this lying down. In April, a tiger disabled a young boy who poked his hand in the bars.

Toshev, so far in vain, has even put in a plea for help from the local militia.

Until he can get reinforcements, everybody's lunkering down for the onslaught.

"We're in a state of militant readiness," Toshev said.

Violence used to settle traffic disputes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Increasingly heavy violence as a method of resolving disputes among motorists is taking its toll on the streets and highways of California.

A young motorist cut in front of a pickup truck on Interstate 80 at Sacramento. A passenger in the second vehicle shot him dead.

In Los Angeles, a driver sped along at 100 miles an hour over 11 miles of city streets. He tried repeatedly to sideswipe a Highway Patrol cruiser or braked sharply to cause a collision with the pursuing officer.

A young man in San Jose was critically wounded after his passenger complained at a reckless driver, who pulled a gun and shot three times.

Nerve-shattering snipings of civilians and police officers along freeways are almost commonplace.

Where once a relatively minor traffic mishaps or exchange of angry words between motorists might have provoked a fist-fight, now it may invite gunplay or vehicle rammings or tire iron beatings.

The Highway Patrol keeps no statistics on confrontations between motorists, but CHP commanders throughout the state indicated to headquarters in an informal survey that conflicts are increasingly more violent, especially in the use of guns.

Deputy Commissioner A.S. Cooper, a 29-year veteran of the CHP, cites what he calls the "tremendous proliferation in the ownership of firearms" as a key element of the highway violence syndrome.

Recently, a patrolman was found shot to death in Shasta County. The killer allegedly was a suspect he took into custody for drunken driving.

A patrolman stopped a car near Vallejo and was shot three times by a passenger in the back seat.

"It makes it tough for the officer," Cooper says. "He never knows who has the gun."

"Sniper attacks on the freeway are an indication of the increased violence," Cooper noted. "Once a week, we'll have one of those some place in California.

No one knows for certain the causes of highway violence, but theories abound.

Cooper says it may be no more complex than the old characteristic of human behavior that some people "take out their frustrations on somebody else when they feel they have been aggrieved."

Or a driver who packs a gun in his vehicle and uses it to end a highway dispute may feel "he is threatened or feel society is not able to take care of his needs," Cooper said. "He feels he has the right, and to hell with the rest of society."

"My own general feeling is that people have less faith than they once had in government and the ability of police to protect them," he said.

Virginia officials reopen oyster beds

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI) — The 2-year-old ban on taking the world renowned Lynnhaven oysters has been lifted from most of the best oyster beds.

The ban was first imposed in 1975 when the State Health Department declared the oysters inedible because of sewage and other waste that was contaminating the Lynnhaven River.

The efforts of local authorities to clean up the water pollution contributed to the state's decision last week to reopen about 1,600 acres of Lynnhaven oyster beds in the river and neighboring Broad Bay.

Chinatown opens doors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Chinatown is launching a formal attempt to lure back tourists who were frightened away by a wave of violence by youth gangs struggling to gain control of gambling and extortion rackets.

For the first time, private religious and cultural institutions are being opened to the public during the two-week "Mid-Autumn Festival" which opened Monday.

The Chinatown Chamber of Commerce said business in the area has dropped 50 per cent since seven persons were slain in violence that began anew Sept. 4 when five innocent victims were shot to death at the Golden Dragon Restaurant.

Joe Fong, after whom one of the youth gangs was named, discussed the turmoil on the eve of the festival from his cell at the Deuel Vocational Institution near Tracy, Calif.

He said in an interview with the San Francisco Examiner that Chinatown's powerful tongs — fraternal and social organizations formed by immigrants — "run gambling houses. They break the law. They do anything they want, but do you ever see them in jail?"

Fong added: "If things have been going on in Chinatown for so long, how come nobody has investigated it? Where is the Board of Supervisors? Where are the police? You mean to tell me that people have been killing one another over nothing — that there is no organized crime in Chinatown?"

Citing "establishment" groups in Chinatown, Fong, serving a life sentence for conspiracy to commit murder, told the Examiner:

"The establishment in Chinatown — they have lots of money. They used to pay kids to break up rallies in favor of Red China. They would pay kids $10 a head just to march in their parades."

The San Francisco Convention and Visitors Bureau, worried about the drop in tourism, the city's chief industry, said: "Throughout the festival the district's stores will be lighted until midnight and its religious and cultural institutions will be open to the public.

"Dancing lions will dispel demons and, to guarantee extra good vibes, the benevolent Golden Dragon will emerge from its lair."

Carter overrules aeronautics order

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter overruled the Civil Aeronautics Board Monday and approved an experimental $256 budget roundtrip airfare between New York and London and a $296 advanced purchase excursion fare between other eastern cities and London.

The CAB had turned down the so-called Super-Apex (advanced purchase excursion) fares for major scheduled airline trips between London and Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Washington and Miami.

The $256 and $296 fares would apply only from the East Coast. For cities farther to the west, such as Los Angeles, there would be an additional transcontinental fare based on mileage.

"I have decided to reject the board's order as inconsistent with this administration's foreign economic policy," Carter said in a letter to the CAB.

"I must emphasize that my international aviation policy carries with it a commitment to low fare, competitive international air service for the benefit of American consumers."

The fares Carter approved will be available through March 31. The White House said Transportation Secretary Brock Adams will study these winter fares to determine "how responsive they are to the public need and how these fares and charter services might be made more widely available."

The CAB recently approved a $256 standby fare for the major airlines. But it rejected a $256 budget fare as well as the $299 Super-Apex fare proposed by the international airline cartel as ways to compete with Britain's Laker Airways Skytrain.

The Skytrain, offering scheduled flights with a no-reservation fare of $236, began operation today.

The CAB had expressed concern that the $236 budget fare was not competitive with Skytrain, considering the difference in the service provided, while the $299 Super-Apex fare was a threat to the charter airlines and no competition to Sky train.

Anti-age bias rules in works

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is drafting new national standards for age discrimination in federal programs, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano said today.

He said the department "will move ahead rapidly with care and sensitivity" in drafting requirements for the Age Discrimination Act of 1975.

"The most critical issue before us — and one on which the statute offers little, if any, guidance — is to determine which programs and practices containing age and age-related distinctions are to be permitted and which ones are not," Califano said.

Age-related considerations are prevalent in HEW programs and some are justified, Califano told the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The commission began hearings to determine the extent of discrimination based on age in subsidized programs.

Preventive medicine programs aimed at diseases affecting primarily children or older persons "are reasonably targeted toward segments of the population defined in age and age-related terms," Califano said.

Offer rejected

NEW YORK (UPI) — Directors of Sunshine Mining Co. Monday announced they had rejected a tender offer for the company's common stock made by Great Western United Corp.

The directors said the Great Western offer was "not in the best interest" of Sunshine shareholders and the company.

1912 Model-T sold

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — A Blackfoot car dealer paid $5,200 today for a 1912 Model-T Ford which was auctioned off by Bingham County Sheriff Dee Jorgensen.

Dan Redford was the high bidder at the auction attended by more than 30 persons.

The antique Ford, owned by Tom Griffiths of Blackfoot, was sold on the lien of Boise Attorney Stanley Crow for attorney fees claimed by Crow.

Bidding started at $300.

Griffiths wanted to bid $15,000 to get his car, but the sheriff wouldn't accept the bid because he said Griffiths couldn't raise the money.

"I don't know what we will do with it," Redford said. "Probably trade it or sell it. I'm not an antique collector."

Disabled adult plan revealed by Gem aide

TWIN FALLS — Jerry R. Fowler discussed Idaho Department of Health and Welfare plans to serve Idaho's developmentally disabled adults at the Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, Inc., (MVRS) meeting Wednesday.

Fowler, chief of the Bureau of Adult and Child Development, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, spoke at the MVRS fourth annual meeting held at George K's.

Fowler said the department has asked the 1977 Idaho Legislature to clarify which agency should be responsible for serving the adult developmentally disabled population.

"Legislative intent, through funds appropriated to the department, indicates the legislature decided the responsibility rests with health and welfare," Fowler said.

He also said the department plans to meet the needs of disabled adults through purchasing services from rehabilitation facilities like MVRS.

MVRS trustees elected for the upcoming year were: James T. Jones, president, and Neil Cross, vice president, both Eden; Marilyn Knigge, secretary, Filer; Jerry Martin, treasurer, Jerome; C.E. Bossard and Robert Coiner, Twin Falls; Jerry Fowler and K.E. Fronk, Burley; Dolores Hansen, Shoshone; Marilee Kohtz, Twin Falls; Helen H. Lucke, Gooding, and Keith Shewmaker, Jerome.

Awards were presented to a number of individuals and businesses who provided assistance instrumental to the development and growth of Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services during 1976-1977.

Receiving recognition awards for assisting with the rehabilitation segment of the MVRS program were the College of Southern Idaho Curriculum Development Department, M and M Auto Reconditioning and Troy National, Inc.

Awards recognizing assistance in securing contract work were presented to Bill Workman Ford, Bob Reese Motor Co., Farm Bureau and Insurance Services, First United Presbyterian Church, Region V of the Department of Health and Welfare, Longview Fibre Co., Mountain Bell, Sioux Honey Association and the Twin Falls Holiday Inn. Recognition certificates were also presented to Berg Insurance, First Security Bank of Idaho, KLIX Radio Station, KMTW-FM Stereo 96, KMVT Television, Jerry Martin, Obenchain Insurance and Donald Rahe for their continued support.

Awards of special significance were the Advocate of the Year Award presented to Michael J. McIntyre, Therapy Technician II, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare; The Outstanding Employer of the Year Award presented to the Alley Motel and Restaurant, and the Outstanding Trainee of the Year Award presented to Myriam Walley of Jerome.

The Clarke I. Maddox Memorial Award for the outstanding employee of the year was presented to Janet Messersmith, MVRS Bookkeeper.

Korean president willing to talk

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — North Korean President Kim Il-sung has sent a letter to President Carter through the African state of Gabon, expressing his willingness to talk with the United States, a foreign Ministry report to the National Assembly said Monday.

The report, accompanying the government's 1978 budget, said Kim's letter was conveyed through Gabonese President Omar Bongo who visited North Korea last may.

Bongo's role as a messenger was revealed last August when South Korean Foreign Minister Park Tong-jin visited the African country for an official visit, according to the report.

Bongo reportedly told Park that Gabon, which is chairman of the Organization of African Unity, played the messenger's role to show its neutrality in dealing with Korean affairs.

No details of Kim's letter were known but sources said Kim repeated his proposal to talk directly with the United States, bypassing South Korea, and that North Korea has no intention of invading the south.

The United States, through indirect channels, sent a reply in which it stated its position that Washington would not enter into any negotiations with North Korea without the participation of the South Korean government, the sources said.

This was the second known letter from the North Korean leader to the Carter administration. Last December, Kim sent a letter to Carter through the then Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, suggesting similar contacts.

At the time, Carter reportedly sent a reply through the same channel.

Water pollutant eludes officials

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Accident or sabotage? Investigators working to determine how "notoriously odorous" substances got into the water supply serving 70,000 area residents last week still don't know.

Tony Clemente, chief of water management in the Dade County Department of Environmental Resources Management, said Saturday, "We do not at this point have any evidence to say that something (specific) happened."

Water was restored to the 35-square-mile area Saturday, following a two-day ban of the system's use.

Officials said speculation over possible sabotage — first voiced in the wake of last Thursday's ban on the use of the water for anything but bathing — was "losing ground," but hasn't been ruled out.

On the other hand, they said, if the pollutants entered the water system by accident, they still could not suggest how the mishap occurred.

Meanwhile, laboratory, environmental, Health Department and police officials continued their efforts to identify precisely the pesticides and organic sulphur compounds found in the water, and to explain how they got there.

These are notoriously odorous substances, even at extremely low levels of concentration, Clemente said. "You can smell it long before you find it."

He said the substances are not toxic.

Program completed

TWIN FALLS — Cloyce Edwards, Twin Falls, recently completed phase I of the Civil Preparedness Career Development Program presented by the region 8 staff of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency (DCPA).

The program was held at Fairchild Air Force Base near Spokane, Wash. The ten-day course is designed to prepare the nation to survive and recover from a nuclear attack.

Edwards plans to complete all four phases of the program.

Minnesota probes Billy Graham plan

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association Sunday said that the Minnesota Securities Division has asked for more information regarding an annuity program.

A spokesman for the association said the request concerned the religious organization's Charitable Gift Annuity Program within Minnesota. Actuaries and accountants were preparing a response, he said.

He said no federal agency has initiated an investigation.

The annuity program is a small part of the association's ministry, the spokesman said. He also said all of the annuities are 100 percent funded, unlike some others.

"We doubt if any organization, religious or secular, takes greater precaution on behalf of its annuitants," the spokesman said.

The charitable gift annuity program has "absolutely no connection with the World Evangelism and Christian Educational Fund," the spokesman said.

Vietnam to revive its rubber industry

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — Vietnam has embarked on a planting and replanting program to rehabilitate its rubber industry devastated by long years of war, a Malaysian rubber team said Sunday.

The six-man team led by Dr. B.C. Sekhar, the Malaysian rubber research controller, was in Vietnam to help in the rehabilitation as part of Malaysia's goodwill gesture to the communist regime.

Sekhar told newsmen on returning here Sunday night that the team will submit its recommendations to the Malaysian government on ways Vietnam can revive its rubber industry.

He said Vietnam has begun a program of planting and replanting rubber trees to modernize the industry.

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him "John") took out a life insurance policy 15 years ago. The agent hesitated selling him a policy because John is 6 foot 9. The agent said "extra tall" people have a shorter life expectancy because they usually develop heart problems. He explained that the heart has to work much harder pumping the blood in a very tall person than in a person of average size.

I believe Mother Nature compensates by giving the extra large man a heart large enough to handle the job, but John believes the agent, and he keeps insisting he'll never see 55. (He's 45 now.) Both John's parents are alive and in their 80s.

Anything you can find out about this will be greatly appreciated.

JOHN'S WIFE

Agent plants 'heart' seed

DEAR WIFE: My heart expert says, "I am not aware of any documented evidence supporting the theory that the heart works harder in extra tall people; certainly it doesn't in giraffes and in professional basketball players. John would do better to listen to a competent cardiologist than to the insurance agent."

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who recently married a widower. He keeps talking about his first wife. What should I do?

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Keep talking about your next husband.

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office, and every time there is a collection to be taken up to buy a coworker a gift, this one woman always does the collecting and buying. Recently she bought our supervisor a purse. She said it cost $21. I like the purse very much and went to the store to buy one for myself. There, I found it was marked $16.98, so I asked the manager if the purse had been marked down. He assured me it had not, and he said they never had one even similar at any other price.

In checking the price on a few other items, I found that this woman had ripped us off when buying some other gifts. I told several coworkers, but no one wants to mention it to her, and I don't either.

Next time a collection is made, how should this be handled?

RIPPED OFF

DEAR RIPPED: Why wait until "next time"? Since you are the one who uncovered this petty chiseling, let the chiseler know what you learned. You needn't apologize when calling a crook a crook.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

Help! I'm desperate! I'm a 40-year-old female and have suffered with duodenal ulcers for over 10 years. I've had three major bleeds and doctors pleading to operate.

I quit my job as "job pressures" created a second ulcer plus a bleed. I could endure the ulcer discomfort but with it always came an excruciating backache which makes me feel weak.

Not working has relieved my symptoms but has not been a total cure. Now, I've read of a new miracle drug which produces a rapid cure of ulcers but it's in England.

Is there any hope for me other than surgery? Does the drug show promising results?

Ulcer victim

Dear Reader—

A peptic ulcer may occur in either the stomach or the duodenum, but 80 per cent of them are duodenal — the type you have. They are much more common in men than in women and perhaps that is partly related to "job pressures" since more men are in high pressure jobs than women. Your job experience may be an example of how this could change if more and more women move into high pressure jobs.

The pain in the back may be caused by the ulcer location. It may be penetrating the back side of the duodenum or irritating the pancreas which is imbedded against the duodenum.

I used to advise a period of hospitalization to treat the ulcer under controlled conditions before deciding on surgery. That way the doctor could be sure the medicines were taken regularly in the right amounts and that the diet was exactly what he prescribed. It is still a good idea but the staggering costs of hospitalization makes it less attractive to go into the hospital unless you absolutely have to do so. It is one way to isolate the patient from the other environmental stresses such as some of those related to the family job.

The medicine you have asked about is Cimetidine, also marketed by Smith Kline as Tagamet. It is classed as an investigational drug and is not available in the United States or Canada but is being used in England. It is being investigated in the United States now and it has a good press at this point. It is not the first medicine that has been proclaimed as the ultimate answer to ulcers. The number of studies available are still small and the experience with it is too limited to say what its long term use in ulcer therapy may prove to be.

It neutralizes histamine and in that way helps to decrease the stomach's production of acid. The decreased acidity is the key to its effectiveness in decreasing pain and promoting healing. The ulcer problem usually recurs within seven days after the medicine is stopped. A recent report states the drug is ineffective in stopping bleeding so I'm not sure that would be your answer.

I am sending you the Health Letter number 1-5, Ulcers-Duodenal, Stomach, to point out what you should be doing for yourself. Others who want information on management of ulcer problems can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. If you smoke, stop. Eliminate all sources of caffeine including coffee, tea and colas and use no alcohol.

High steppers

JACQUELINE ONASSIS used to walk with Secret Service men in tow; Greta Garbo strides forth incognito. Aristotle walked so often and to such purpose that his school of philosophy has been dubbed "peripatetic"; Abraham Lincoln found walking a means of emancipation in troubled times. Harry S Truman led a stream of huffing-puffing newsmen; English poet John Keats know walking led to flights of fancy. President Jimmy Carter walked to the White House with a winning smile on his face. Millions of Americans step forth daily to join the steady stream of those walking for better living.

Look who's stepping right out

Greta Garbo does it...concealed in dark glasses, swathed in masking scarves. Billy Graham does it...religiously. Rose Kennedy does it...and it puts roses in her cheeks. Her former daughter-in-law, Jacqueline Onassis, does it, too...to the delight of Jackie-watchers everywhere. Nutritionist Gayelord Hauser does it...which doesn't surprise anyone. And, President Jimmy Carter broke tradition to do it, immediately after the inauguration. They're all doing it...and breathing a little easier because of it.

What are all these famous folks doing? They're walking! And on each walk, they are joined by more and more Americans who are learning that man's most natural exercise is beneficial both to heart and soul. In fact, according to the Sole Leather Council, which advises flexible leather-soled footwear for best comfort in walking, the average American today walks more than 3,000 miles per year.

Some walk for the exercise alone, stretching muscles, expanding their lungs, breathing freely. It has been proven that an invigorating walk can be instrumental in lowering blood pressure and pulse rate, and in sustaining the heart muscle.

Many walk for the sheer pleasure of it, taking joy in seeing things that can be seen only on foot. Some walk to combat stress. A short, brisk walk can drive away tension and anger, releasing them before they become physical problems.

It doesn't matter why one walks; what matters is that in walking, one takes a giant step forward towards physical and mental well-being.

Until the relatively recent resurgence of walking as a means of exercise, it was not highly valued by the average American in search of fitness. Perhaps because walking is just too easy, too natural: it requires no great effort, no athletic prowess nor any special training. Even a short, brisk walk is beneficial. Perhaps we are still geared to thinking, as our Puritan forefathers did, that if a "medicine" does not taste bad, it won't do any good. That does not hold true for walking.

A walker is self-reliant: one doesn't need a partner or a team to partake. A walker is free: one can walk any time, any place. And a walker can maintain his own anonymity if he so desires: no "uniform" is required beyond comfortable clothing and sturdy shoes with leather soles that bend and stretch with the foot as it steps and strides.

Take a tip from the "Star" specialists: pull on those shoes and step out. Walking...it's an exercise after your own heart.

Walk— it'll do your heart good

"Put yourself back in circulation...walk." That's the advice of Dr. Albert Kattus, chief of cardiology, University of California, when talking to patients. "As a cardiologist," says Kattus, past chairman of the exercise committee for the American Heart Association, "I'm concerned with finding exercises that can forestall the possibility of heart problems in others not afflicted. Walking not only does not put a strain on the heart, it actually relieves stress in the way it acts upon the circulatory system."

Briefly, the circulation story is this: Your blood, some five quarts of it, makes a circuit of some 60,000 to 100,000 miles once every minute, to and from the heart. It goes out laden with oxygen, nutrients, enzymes and hormones to be distributed to each of the body's 30 trillion cells; it returns equally laden with waste products to dispose. The heart itself acts as a pump; it is aided by the arteries to propel the flow of blood along with minute but regular contractions.

The return route to the heart, however, is via the veins. These are without the power of muscular contractions; thus the heart must pump even harder against gravitational forces.

Walking brings the muscles of the feet, calves, thighs, buttocks and abdomen into play, as well as the diaphragm. Each contracts and releases in a steady rhythm, squeezing the veins to press the blood along its route...upward, against gravity. This lessens the amount of stress put upon the heart: circulation speeds up, and the heart rate and blood pressure are reduced correspondingly.

Walking has the extra benefit of being a "likely" exercise. It is one of the natural functions of the human body, and we all do it, every day. To make certain we are getting the most out of this minimal effort, walk briskly and with purpose. Have a destination in mind. Lengthen your stride to cover more ground faster; it is easier and more natural than merely moving your legs at a faster pace. Wear comfortable clothing that will not interfere with your stride. And, most importantly, wear shoes that will help instead of impair movement.

Join the millions who are now walking to their heart's content. You'll be in good company.

Sophia Loren was 43 years old last Tuesday and observed that she really didn't mind because she realizes "one can't be a sex symbol forever."

In New York to promote her new film, "A Special Day," produced by her husband Carlo Ponti, she said they were thinking of moving permanently to the United States with their two sons, Carlo Jr., 8, and Eduardo, 4. Problems with Italian financial policies drove them from Rome to Paris in recent years.

Alice Faye, 62, will return to the screen as a murder suspect in the screwball comedy called "Every Girl Should Have One," directed and written by Robert Hyatt and also staring Robert Alda.

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office and outspoken former Brookings economist who has been criticized by some House of Representative leaders for her independent views, is among those believed to be in the running to succeed Bert Lance as director of the Office of Management and Budget. Her recent criticism of President Carter's energy legislation, however, may hurt her chances.

Hilma Wolitzer's second novel, "In the Flesh," published by William Morrow and Company, is attracting unusual praise — even more so than her first effort, "Ending."

Even though Yvonne Wilder has received an Emmy nomination for her dramatic role, performed in both the stage and screen versions of "West Side Story," and helped co-author the "Count Yorga" horror films, she wants to be identified first and foremost as a comedienne.

Celeste Yarnall, 30, West Los Angeles' first female commercial real estate broker, is now a six-figure-income vice president of Greenwood and Company of Los Angeles — since she has only been in the business for little more than four years. She is also an actress having been in television shows, commercials and movies.

Program set

RUPERT — A "Day in Court" program is scheduled for Oct. 29 in the Judicial building in Rupert.

The event, sponsored by the Magic Valley Legal Secretaries Association, will begin with registration at 9 a.m. and the mock trial starting at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 29.

Members of the Fifth District Bar Association will participate in the trial, as well as members of the legal secretaries group.

Following lunch Keith Matthews, regional supervisor-poly-graphist, of the Department of Liquor Law and Criminal Investigation, will conduct a polygraph demonstration.

Plans for the program were discussed at a recent meeting of the legal secretaries at the offices of Parsons and Smith, according to Maureen McClung, president.

She said anyone wishing additional information about the Day in Court may call her at 436-9331; Ruth Thrall, 678-8382; Charlene Hine, 733-7180; Barbara Morse, 324-8131, or Barbara Gonzales, 934-4429.

MRS. FRANCIS Harris, Hansen, left, was honored as the Mental Health Volunteer of the Year at the annual meeting of the Mental Health Association of Idaho last week in Coeur d'Alene. She is presented the plaque bearing the association's logo by Lorayne Smith, president of the local mental health chapter.

He will also administer the Ambassador program and all ticket sales for Dollar and Baldy Mountains.

Prior to his arrival in Sun Valley he worked for two years for Vail Associates in Vail, Colo., as a supervisor in the mountain department. Before traveling west, Berry worked as assistant operations manager at Hunter Mountain ski area, N.Y., and served as media specialist at Harvard Graduate School of Education, Harvard University.

Suit OK sought

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Attorneys for a fired female employee of former Rep. Otto E. Passman, D-La., asked a federal appeals court Monday to uphold a decision allowing her to sue Passman for sex descrimination.

Attorneys for Shirley Davis said Passman wrongly tried to defend her firing by cloaking himself in the protection of the Speech and Debate Clause of the Constitution, a provision protecting congressmen for the actions they take as part of their legislative duties.

"Judgment in personnel matters is not legislative," said Sana Shtasel, one of two Washington, D.C., attorneys representing Mrs. Davis, who was fired in 1974 as Passman's deputy administrative assistant.

Mrs. Shtasel said if the court ruled in Passman's favor, virtually all actions of congressmen or their staff members would be exempt from court challenge.

Opening lead — Q♦

By Oswald & James Jacoby

We are indebted to Victor Mollo's book "Test Your Bridge" for today's hand. If West opens a trump against the six-spade contract, South will have to fall back on the double heart finesse to bring the slam home. As you ... lers can see Victor has given West both the king and ... of hearts, so that declarer loses both finesses, game, rubber and possibly his temper.

At the table, West opened the queen of diamonds. Declarer still lost his contract because he drew trumps to start the play.

His correct play was to cash the ace and king of clubs and his second high diamond. He should lead a trump to dummy next to check for a 4-0 trump break. When both opponents followed he should ruff a club in his own hand, lead another trump to see both opponents follow, ruff dummy's last club and his own last diamond, lead a heart from dummy and play his 10. West could take his jack but would have no lead back to hurt declarer.

Incidentally, in spite of the tempting honor combinations, West's right lead was a trump.

Ask the Jacobys

A Massachusetts reader wants to know if whist was a very easy game to play.

No, it wasn't. While there was no bidding there were no bidding problems. There was also no dummy so the play was in the dark and most difficult.

Bank regulators to stop inside wheeling, dealing

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Federal bank regulators said Monday they are about to put a stop to wheeling and dealing by insiders in the banking business as a result of the Bert Lance affair.

The extensive inquiry into the jumbled financial dealings of the former budget director has raised questions about the conduct of the three federal agencies that regulate the banking industry.

At a hearing, Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., demanded to know what the agencies plan to do about the "special privileges" and "loopholes" he said were available to bank officers and directors.

The strongest stance was taken by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, an agency only distantly involved in the Lance affair.

FCIC chairman George le Maistre said he was preparing to recommend stiffer rules on loans and overdrafts. He said rules would be drawn to "remove any doubt" about the impropriety of making loans to insiders on terms better than those available to other good customers.

During the Lance investigation regulators said the $450,000 in overdrafts by Lance and members of his family constituted interest-free loans.

LeMaistre also said the agency would require insiders to inform their boards of directors of any loans they had from a correspondent bank. He said the boards would also be required to review these relationships and report on their effect on the bank.

This regulation is an apparent outgrowth of Lance's pattern of obtaining personal loans from banks at which his own bank maintained interest-free correspondent deposits.

Steven S. Gardner, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve, said stiffer rules were needed on the takeover of banks through the use of loans from other banks.

However, he said, "I reject the concept that we need to propose pervasive and severely limiting broader restrictions" on bankers.

Officials of the Federal Reserve system have reportedly been lobbying intensively on both sides of Capitol Hill to head off a number of stiffer regulatory proposals, have surfaced in the Lance affair.

The banking industry, as a whole opposes more regulation and, in fact, was among the first industry groups to call for Lance's resignation.

The first test of whether Lance has put Congress in a mood to tighten the reins on bankers will come this Friday when the House is scheduled to vote on a bill introduced by Rep. Benjamin Rossenthal, D-N.Y., for a GHU audit of the three federal bank regulators.

Less gas to US, Schlesinger says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Canada is sure to ease its limit on exporting natural gas to the United States once the pipeline is built across Canada from Alaska to the "lower 48" states, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said today.

Schlesinger told the Senate Energy Committee the United States has "no hard, firm contract" about getting more Canadian gas.

"But it is clear we will get more (Canadian) gas than we otherwise would have gotten had the Alcan pipeline not been built," Schlesinger said.

President Carter has chosen the route proposed by Alcan Pipeline Co., a decision subject to Congress' review. The route would go along the oil pipeline then head southeastward, splitting in Canada into two lines that would reach the West Coast and Midwest areas.

"The Alcan Pipeline system will deliver more natural gas at less cost to a greater number of Americans than any other transportation system," Schlesinger said.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, brought up the point about Canada's having limited the amount of gas it sells to the United States.

Compared with the last competing proposal to drop out of the running — the El Paso Co. Alaska plan for an "all America" route, the Alcan route has "significantly lower cost of service than El Paso ...an ultimate savings of $6 billion for U.S. consumers over the life of the Alcan project," Schlesinger said.

Because the Alcan line can carry some Canadian gas, Stevens asked if "the limit on export of gas to the United States will be expanded and we can expect increased Canadian exports."

Schlesinger replied, "There is no question that we will get more gas if we need that gas, senator."

Stevens then asked if it is possible provincial governments will ignore the Canadian-U.S. agreements on the line.

"It is the provincial governments that have the authority," Stevens said.

Schlesinger said, "We are doubly protected" because the Canadian government will guarantee its agreements — that is, guarantee compliance of all involved.

Military pollution battle gets boost

©Chicago Daily News

The Environmental Protection Agency's lagging battle against pollution by military bases and other federal installations will get a big boost next month, federal officials said.

Up till now, a "gentlemen's agreement" interfered with enforcement activities against those federal installations that missed EPA's July 1 deadline for eliminating sources of water pollution.

But a dual-pronged compliance campaign will begin Oct. 1 that may take an offending agency all the way up to the office that controls federal purse strings, according to Dale Bryson, deputy director of the EPA's regional enforcement division.

Of 185 federal waste dischargers in the six-state Midwest EPA region, 92 violate clean water standards. The offenders list includes some large military bases, such as Ft. Sheridan and Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Under the new compliance plan, the enforcement division, which tracks the status of compliance, will team up with the EPA's newly created Office of Federal Activities to crack down on federal scofflaws, Bryson said.

"Where we find an instance of noncompliance, we will contact the federal facility and find out the story," he said.

If the agency won't clean up its act, the enforcement division elevates the pollution complaint to the Office of Federal Activities, which begins its activities Oct. 1. That office will work with the Washington-based Office of Management and Budget, which controls the finances of all federal agencies.

The usual reason for noncompliance with pollution guidelines is that the cost hasn't been included in the offending agency's budget, Bryson said. And the time needed for compliance also varies, he added.

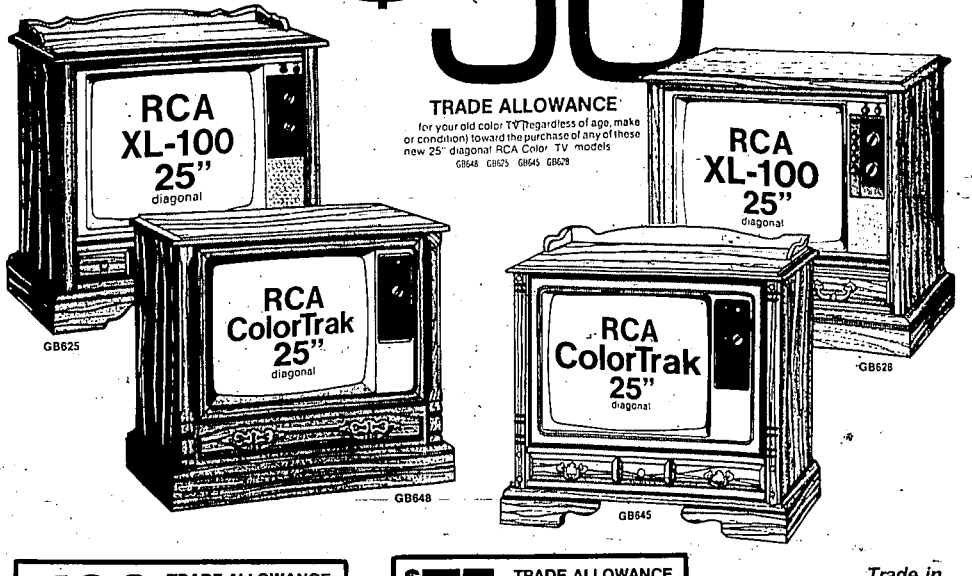

"It depends on the complexity of the problem and how willing the agency is to get off its duff and do something," he said.

PORKY PACERS LEAVE GATE IN TRIAL HEAT FOR RACE UPI

Winner in 'by a snout'

GALVA, Ill. (UPI) — When the racers cross the finish line at this week's Farm Progress Show, judges won't declare winners "by a nose." It will be "by a snout."

After a month of training, Heinold Companies is sponsoring a full-fledged program of pig racing at the exposition north of Washington, Iowa.

Twenty-five racing pigs, clad in racing silks, will take turns sprinting from a special starting gate at the show Tuesday through Thursday. They will race 40 yards along a sawdust course, clocked by an electronic scoreboard. A mirror hanging over the track will provide easy viewing for spectators.

Heinold, an independent hog buyer, will permit visitors to bet on the races for promotional prizes.

Roy Holding, advertising manager for Heinold, said the idea for pig races came partly from desperation. With scores of equipment, seed, fertilizer and other firms vying for attention at the show, a gimmick is an absolute must.

"We said, 'Why not race hogs?'" Holding explained.

He trained the hogs by keeping them hungry, then putting a feed dish at the end of the course.

"Within eight days they knew enough to get into the starting gate" on command, he said. "They condition remarkably fast. We thought it would take a month.

"One guy can't handle them anymore. They'll line up quick and if you're not ready, they'll be down at the end again."

Holding already has heard a lot of bad jokes about his project but isn't concerned. A bigger worry, he said, is that "some old codger farmers are going to sit around the tent all day, making book on the races."

New systems save energy

© Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Not too long ago, businesses took pretty much of a hit-or-miss, common sense, extremely low-cost approach to energy saving.

Employes were cautioned to close windows on hot or cold days, lights were turned off in unoccupied rooms if someone thought about it and thermostats were turned up in summer and down in winter — until someone turned them back again — and storm windows were put up.

Now, however, energy saving has become big business, and Honeywell, Inc., is one of the big practitioners.

This isn't an entirely new field for Honeywell, Edson W. Spencer, the company's president and chief executive officer, points out. "In 1916, the company had an advertisement advising, 'Turn down the thermostat and save coal. So you see, it's nothing new."

But things have come a long way from manually turning down a thermostat.

Now there are microprocessors and computers, systems joining whole shopping centers to one central control point and sensors which can tell if there's someone in a room or if the lights should be turned down.

"We're interested in conservation controls," Spencer said. "Of course, once a system is installed, it can be used for many more things, such as security control and fire prevention."

Do the sophisticated systems work? And do they pay off in over-all money savings as well as fuel efficiency?

Definitely they do, Spencer said. "For instance, we put a major energy-saving system into our new office building in Kansas City. It paid for itself in eight months. From now on, it's all profit."

How does this come out in dollars?

"A supermarket spending $40,000 to $50,000 a year for energy could save 10 to 20 per cent with the right system," he says.

There are a number of specific actions which can save large amounts of energy, he explained.

"One of the basics is zoning heating and air conditioning, so that areas which need more heating or cooling get more than those which need less."

For instance, he said, outside rooms are more rapidly affected by ambient temperature changes than rooms toward the center of a building. Thus, when temperatures change outside, heating or air conditioning should be changed first in those outside rooms.

There is a move toward using more outside air in smaller energy systems. On a warm day, when the temperature drops below the air-conditioning temperature, the building will still need cooling because of built-up heat. By including a portion of ambient air, a lesser amount of the warmer inside air will have to be cooled.

The same principle is true during cool weather when the temperature rises.

With a new, sophisticated system, sensors inside and outside of the building monitor temperatures and temperature changes to determine when the supply of outside air should be increased or decreased.

Although the principles aren't new, the increasing cost of energy makes their application far more important.

Even little actions can be large savers, Spencer said. "We can save money by turning off the heating or air-conditioning blower in work spaces during coffee breaks," he said.

Oil profit fuss simmers

©Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department and the Federal Energy Administration appear to be continuing a long-simmering dispute over who will prosecute multibillion-dollar oil-overcharge cases still pending as an aftermath of the Arab oil embargo of 1973.

The cases, which potentially involve several billion dollars and thousands of charges against major oil companies, utilities and oil brokers for artificially raising prices to consumers during the embargo crisis, have been backlogged for months in the office of the FEA's general counsel.

According to those familiar with them, the cases include allegations of extremely complex brokering practices including so-called "daisy chains" in which middlemen conspired to sell and resell the same carload of oil several times before it reached a utility, resulting in unusually high fuel charges which the utility passed on to consumers.

According to the report of a task force appointed to investigate the status of the cases, the efforts of FEA lawyers to prepare them for trial were "ineffective."

The cases, where often shunted back and forth between FEA lawyers and auditors in an exercise of "administrative ping-pong" which "paralyzed" the agency's enforcement efforts, according to the task force.

The task force, headed by Stanley Sporkin, director of the enforcement division of the Securities and Exchange Commission, found that an additional problem was that the cases had to be brought to court through the Justice Department's Civil Division. According to the Sporkin unit, that division often wrangled with FEA attorneys and did not have enough lawyers to handle the court work.

The task force called for appointment of a special prosecutor within FEA who would have "complete responsibility" for prosecuting the cases — a move which, if implemented, would have ended Justice's involvement in the cases.

Sources say feuding between Justice and FEA attorneys has continued since the Sporkin task force released its conclusions last July.

Earlier this month, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of a House Commerce subcommittee which will hold hearings on the status of the oil cases on Wednesday, received a letter from Barbara H. Babcock, assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Division, which opposed giving FEA complete jurisdiction over the cases.

The letter states that while Justice has been "highly successful" in pressing the cases that have emerged from FEA, "In all candor it must be noted that our success has often been achieved notwithstanding the failure of refusal of FEA's Office of General counsel to fully cooperate and work with the Department."

Babcock charged that FEA cases "have often been poorly investigated, analyzed and prepared in terms of the performance of underlying audits and or gathering the relevant evidentiary materials."

The letter reportedly exacerbated the feud between the two agencies.

"We are trying to work out an arrangement with them on this and we don't see any point in bringing up past problems in this area," said an FEA spokesman.

Comeback in China for Confucius

HONG KONG (UPI) — Confucius, that ancient sage whose philosophy was the cornerstone of Chinese culture for centuries, may be making a comeback in China.

Signs of a possible return to favor coincide with his 2,528th birthday, which this year falls on the same day as the Autumn Moon Festival — Sept. 28.

For the past few years, Confucius has been under party attack as a man who was "sinister and cunning but rotten to the core."

The anti-Confucius campaign reached its peak in 1974, when radical elements led by the now notorious "Gang of Four" used it to attack high level policy and people, including the late Premier Chou En-lai — whom they termed a "modern-day Confucius."

The late party Chairman Mao Tse-tung long opposed Confucianism because of the obstacle it posed to his efforts to uproot stifling old traditions and ideas.

No top level party officials in Peking have yet come out in support of rehabilitating Confucius, although they say the anti-Confucius campaign was misused and misdirected.

But some lower level officials are saying that he was not all bad, according to reports from Peking published in a local Communist newspaper that closely adheres to Peking's policy lines.

Some aspects of Confucianism should be criticized, the report said, but what it has to offer in the cultural field should not be rejected.

Although Mao criticized Confucius, even he did not totally negate Confucianism, the report said.

This turns the clock back more than 15 years, when a leading Peking newspaper specializing in cultural affairs, Kwangming Daily, said, "Confucius was a middle-of-the-roader with a slight leaning to the left."

Purged ex-President Liu Shao-chi was criticized for trying to reconcile Confucian ethic with Communist doctrine.

Stocks at Midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices inched higher Tuesday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was ahead 0.70 point to 842.35 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 153 to 76, among the 369 issues crossing the tape.

Analysts said investors apparently have begun bargain hunting following the Dow's steep 163-point slide this year. They shrugged off concerns Monday about interest rates, the economy and the Middle East.

"Investors still are uneasy about speculation that last week's Federal Reserve Board credit tightening — designed to stem a $2 billion money supply surge — and a boost in commercial paper rates soon would push the prime rate a quarter point higher to 7½ per cent.

Many also were dismayed that the Commerce Department's report Monday of a $2.67 billion August trade deficit was up from $2.33 billion in July and the second largest in U.S. history.

However, President Carter, addressing a joint meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, appeared to encourage some investors when said late Monday the U.S. economy was "health and growing."

Contract expires in 4 days

Fire fighters request one more meeting

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just four days before their current contract expires, Twin Falls fire fighters Monday requested one more meeting with city officials in stalled wage talks.

City Manager Jean Milar announced at a city council luncheon Monday he had received a letter which requested a meeting later that day. But councilmen said they did not have time to meet that afternoon.

Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln told Milar to attempt to set up a meeting at 4 p.m. Thursday.

The current fire fighters' contract expires Friday night.

High on the list of more than a dozen unresolved issues is wages.

Fire fighters have requested monthly base pay beginning Saturday at $1,150 for captains, $1,075 for drivers, $1,000 for fire fighters and $1,100 for alarm operators.

City officials have approved a city budget for the next fiscal year which sets monthly base pay at $1,044 for captains, $985 for drivers, $916 for fire fighters and $1,012 for alarm operators.

In July, fire fighters and city officials agreed to call in a fact-finding board to hear their differences. The board announced its non-binding recommendations early this month.

Board chairman Perry Swisher, Lewiston, recommended monthly base pay for fire fighters at $1,125 for captains, $1,040 for drivers, $980 for fire fighters and $1,050 for alarm operators.

But the city council decided to stand firm on its wage offer and announced it would offer fire fighters another contract exactly like this year's except for one clause.

The clause on constant manning would be changed under the city's latest proposed contract, allowing fire fighters to work an extra shift, when needed, for regular pay.

The fact-finding panel recommended fire fighters be paid time-and-a-half for extra shifts, the current policy.

Late last week Lloyd Almand, fire fighters' association president, said fire fighters had not met to discuss the proposed contract because he had not received a copy of it. He could not be reached for comment this morning.

In the letter to the council, fire fighters said they were requesting another meeting as is required by law. Fire fighters said the law required a 30-day negotiating period after a fact-finding board recommendation.

At first, Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln, member of the city's negotiating team, said he did not think another meeting was necessary.

But Councilman Leon Smith said, "I think they're gearing up for a good faith-bargaining lawsuit, so we had better go."

Other councilmen agreed.

Almand said earlier fire fighters had several options, including quitting, accepting the city's offer, or working without a contract. He said fire fighters could also file a lawsuit against the city for not bargaining in good faith as is required by law.

City employe pay hike rejected

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council politely said no Monday to city employes requesting an 8 per cent across-the-board pay increase.

About a month ago, city employes requested the estimated $100,000 increase, for the next fiscal year which begins Saturday.

An employes' committee also suggested the council:

— Continue current quarterly salary adjustments based on the Consumer Price Index.

— Increase hourly rates for police officers when they appear in court.

— Provide an additional $25 per month to police officers for obtaining intermediate or advanced certificates in law enforcement training.

— Pay for physical examinations of sewage treatment plant personnel.

While saying no to the 8 per cent increase, $25 adjustments for certificates and paid physicals, the council agreed to continue quarterly salary adjustments and to pay police officers regular wages when appearing in court.

The council currently pays officers $2.50 per hour for court time.

Dennis Chambers, chairman of the committee which represents about 200 city employes excluding city fire fighters, said employes were grateful the council would continue making quarterly employes' salary adjustments based on the rise in the Consumer Price Index.

However, he said employes feel the base pay that the salary is adjusted up from is still very low.

Chambers said this morning employees would meet next Tuesday to discuss the city's offer. He said he expected employes to be satisfied with all council proposals except for the one on wages.

However, he said no employes had expressed an interest in taking legal action against the city or quitting.

Councilman Henry Woodall said the council felt it couldn't give employes an adjustment in the base without asking taxpayers for more money, something we just can't do."

Councilman Stephen R. Lincoln said city officials were expecting the quarterly adjustments to be as much as 9 per cent during the next city fiscal year, Oct. 1, 1977 to Oct. 1, 1978.

"That's probably a bigger increase than your counterparts are getting in private industry," Lincoln said.

Councilman Leon Smith said current base salaries for city employes were determined in a study of other Idaho cities' wage scales last year. He said he expected the quarterly wage adjustments to keep Twin Falls employes' salaries in line with wages in other cities.

Chambers said maybe such a study should be conducted again to make sure city employes were receiving similar wage adjustments. But councilmen did not respond to the suggestion.

Councilmen said they would not pay for physical examinations of sewage plant personnel because they said physicals should be an individual's responsibility.

City Manager Jean Milar said city officials decided not to allow wage increases based on certificates received until a certificate program was devised for all city employes, not just police officers.

Assistant City Manager Thomas Courtney is currently developing such a system, Milar said.

South Hills timber

Bids will be opened Wednesday

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bids will be opened Wednesday on 20 million board feet of timber from the South Hills that Sawtooth National Forest officials admit is only marginally attractive economically.

Sawtooth Forest Planner Jack Hougaard said, "We won't know until the day the bids are opened" whether anyone will elect to harvest the timber.

Hougaard added, however, that he expects some bids on the timber because several western lumber companies encouraged the forest to put the timber up for sale. To avoid the possibility of collusion in bidding, Hougaard would not release the names of companies he thought would submit bids.

The sale represents the first phase in a 10-year plan to harvest 100 million board feet of lumber from the South Hills. Twenty million board feet will be harvested the first year, and about 9 million board feet in each of the next nine years.

The first year harvest is the largest in order to generate enough revenue to justify the initial investment a buyer would have to make to cut and haul the lumber.

Since the sale is intended to salvage what usable timber remains in the wake of a pine-bark beetle infestation in the area, much of the timber is of marginal quality. The forest service estimates that at least 20 per cent and perhaps as much as 30 per cent of the timber in the sale area is already dead.

In addition, the stands of timber are so widely scattered throughout the sale area that an above-average amount of road building will be associated with the sale. Thus the sale is only marginally attractive to prospective buyers.

The forest service estimates the value of all the sawtimber to be harvested during the 10-year plan at about $13,991,000. The cost of logging and hauling added to stumpage fees amounts to about $13,440,000, leaving about a 3 per cent margin of profit for the logger.

The 3 per cent figure represents forest service estimates of the average benefits and cost to all loggers. A logger who is more efficient than the average could turn a higher profit.

That figure is also based on the construction of a mill in Hansen to handle the timber. Hougaard said he believes a prudent operator would build a mill in Hansen because hauling the timber as far as the next nearest mill, in Fairfield, would add $30-plus to the cost of each thousand board feet of timber.

If no mill is built in Hansen, an operator's hauling costs would rise, but the amount of stumpage fees he would pay to the government would fall.

Thus, whether it will cost the government more to prepare and administer the sale than it takes in stumpage fees will depend on whether or not a mill is built in Hansen. The forest service will not be able to determine its benefit-cost ratio until the bids are opened.

Hougaard said he does not know what kind of a mill would be built in Hansen, and he would not predict the economic impact on the area.

By selling the timber, the Sawtooth Forest hopes to return marginally productive forest land to a higher level of production, Hougaard said.

After a logging operation, when the slash is piled and burned and the lodgepole seeds left to germinate in the sun, the trees don't grow back as thickly as after a fire, when they come in as "thick as the hair on a dog's back," Hougaard explained. This makes thinning to the optimum space a more economical project.

Logging will also aid in fire suppression by the removal of much of the pine bark beetle. The beetle tends to infest overmature trees.

The roads that are built to facilitate the logging can be used for years by fuelwood and post and pole cutters and people engaging in recreational activity.

Crossing smoothed UNION PACIFIC Railroad Co. officials install new high-density plastic slats next to the rails at what has long been one of the bumpiest railroad crossings in the Twin Falls area. John D. Tovey, director of Oneida Manufacturing, which makes the forms, says the slats, designed to make car crossing smoother, are expected to last 10 to 12 years.

Determined wife finds the answer

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Military wives, there is hope for you if your husband has been sent on an unaccompanied tour of duty and you don't think you can afford transportation costs to join him.

Lisa Malone, Kimberly, whose husband was recently called for a 13-month tour of duty in Japan, wanted to join her husband and decided not to take no for an answer.

In spite of the fact that costs were prohibitive, she decided she would do all she could to make it possible to take her 17-month-old daughter and join her husband, Lt. William Malone, for the duration of his 13-month unaccompanied tour with the U.S. Marine Corps.

She discovered that a military wife can save a lot of money and still join her husband if she is aware of the simple procedure of securing the proper letters of introduction.

"Being a young family, we wanted to stay together," Mrs. Malone said. "It has been a long hard struggle to get there."

Every four years, as part of his military service, a Marine must go on a tour of foreign duty to Japan for 13 months, according to Malone.

Since the tour is a relatively "short" one, she said, the Marine Corps does not deem it necessary for a man's family to accompany him.

"They don't think it warrants having to move the whole family and all their household goods over there," she explained. "The Marine Corps has gone to court over this several times because other wives have objected."

Instead of objecting, however, Malone decided to try to make the trip on her own to join her husband — and to do it as cheaply as possible.

The air fare itself from San Francisco to Japan is more than $500 in addition to the cost of taking her daughter and of getting them both from Kimberly to San Francisco.

Instead of paying that high cost, though, she and her daughter will board a plane in Twin Falls and fly first to California and then to Japan for a total of only $360 thanks to a money-saving procedure she discovered while making arrangements for her trip.

In order to get the reduced fare, she had to get two letters from her husband's commanding officer.

The first, called a letter of eligibility, declared that she would be living with a legal guardian — her husband — while in Japan and that he would support her.

The second letter verified the fact that her husband was staying in Japan with the First Marine Aircraft Wing, a heavy helicopter squadron.

"I had to show the letters to the travel agency along with my military I.D. to get the half fare," Malone said. "Then I had to get an extended visa to be there for a year."

She had to send all the papers to the Japanese consulate in Portland, Ore., for processing.

All the red tape was worth it, however, since she was able to save half her own fare on the airlines.

The extra red tape delayed her original departure date from Sept. 5 until Monday, but now that she is finally on her way, "it is very exciting that it is happening."

Con Ed forced to shut power off

NEW YORK (UPI) — Just two months after the Great Blackout of '77 crippled New York City, thunderstorms forced Consolidated Edison to shut off power Monday to thousands of customers for about an hour rather than risk another collapse of the whole system.

The utility used "load shedding" to shut off power to 80,000 customers in the borough of the Bronx and neighboring Westchester County suburbs, and reduced voltage throughout the city by 8 per cent just minutes after the thunderstorms struck.

Another 50,000 Westchester customers lost power at various times over a four-hour period because transmission lines were downed by the storms.

Con Ed was severely criticized after a July 13 blackout because technicians on duty did not heed a State Power Authority recommendation they shed some load under similar circumstances to save the whole system. That blackout left New York City without power for 25 hours — a period in which there was widespread looting.

Con Ed President Arthur Hauspurg said lightning struck power lines in Peekskill, N.Y., and in Staten Island at about 3:30 p.m. Monday, reducing generating capacity and causing a power surge. The load shedding began immediately, he said.

Storms flood Missouri

By United Press International

Severe thunderstorms submerged automobiles and brought threats of more flooding in Missouri, while New Yorkers averted a new blackout in a fierce lightning storm Monday.

Intense thunderstorms continued today over the Springfield, Mo., area, producing flash flood warnings as heavy runoff flowed down the Jordan Creek. Cars were reported submerged by the creek's spillover. At Bolivar, Mo., 20 miles north of Springfield, one person was injured and several trees and power lines downed.

Rains continued early today over much of the New England coast, while storms diminished over Florida and much of the Northeast. For Myers and Daytona Beach, Fla., each received more than one inch of rain Monday night.

Kelkers to return to TF

BOISE (UPI) — Rep. George Hansen's represenatives in charge of his western office in Boise announced Monday they were resigning, effective Oct. 13.

Gus and Betty Kelker informed Hansen they were quiting because of Mrs. Kelker's health. They plan to return to Twin Falls.

The Kelkers established Hansen's Boise office two and one half years ago. They had moved to Boise prior to that after Kelker retired as executive editor of the Twin Falls Times-News and became editor of the Journal of Commerce.

They plan to return to Twin Falls, where they said they will engage in free lance writing and photography.

In their letter of resignation, they told Hansen: "Politics, we have found, is a twisting and rocky road but we have managed to plow through and emerge without too many wounds."

Their positions in Hansen's Boise office were unique in that they were one of only four husband-wife teams holding identical posts in congressional offices throughout the country.

California plans for dry '78

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — In planning for the future, state and federal water officials are assuming 1978 will be as bad as 1977 — the worst drought year in California history.

Federal Central Valley Project (CVP) officials will begin a program this week to slow the depletion of water storage in Folsom Lake near Sacramento by reducing discharges into the American River by 250 cubic feet per second, it was reported Sunday.

"We are not implying that another dry year will occur, but our planning should include this possibility," said Billy E. Martin, regional director of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which operates the Central Valley Project.

"We cannot permit the attitude that 'it can't happen here' to limit our efforts at assuring we are prepared for another dry year," echoed Ronald B. Roble, director of the state Department of Water Resources.

However, a Bureau of Reclamation report said that based on historical records, there is only a 2 per cent chance of a repeat 1977 year, a 13 per cent chance of a 1976 year and a 62 per cent chance of an average year.

The report also said a third drought year would idle hydroelectric power plants most of the time and require even stricter rationing, limiting municipal and city use of CVP water to 25 per cent of normal and virtually eliminating CVP water to farmers.

The bureau said that if 1978 is average, most reservoirs will be restored to normal operating levels and 100 per cent of CVP deliveries can be made.

But a state report said that even if 1978 brings average rain and snow, the water supply deficit leading into 1978 would not be erased.

"Furthermore, we cannot assume that 1978 will be wet and that 1977 will be the last dry year of this series," the report said. "In recent history, we have had as many as six consecutive years of below normal precipitation."

Dividend declared

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — U & I Inc. has declared a quarterly dividend of five cents per share of common stock, matching the divident for the previous quarter, but below the 15 cent-per-share dividend declared in March of 1977 and December of 1976.

Rowland M. Cannon, U & I president, said "Severe price depression continues for sugar in the United States, and thus diminishes our earnings prospects, which in turn affects dividends."

The sugar beet processing firm had declared dividends of 30 cents per share for each quarter prior to December of 1976.

"If Congress approves the farm bill — directing the administration to institute a sugar program — that will be helpful in alleviating the current situation," Cannon said.

CHICAGO — Rain in Maine and other weather concerns bolstered potato futures Monday.

The May delivery of Maine spuds ended 18 cents higher at 6.37 per hundredweight while May western russets wound up 13 cents higher at 7.59 cwt. Long Island cash prices also gave a boost to Maine spuds.

Commodity News Service said meats were generally stronger, with cattle slipping off the highs after 10 days of gains. Live cattle ended mixed, but mostly higher, from down 12 cents in October to up 32 cents in December on a trade of 9,071 contracts. The setback was as much as .50 cents from the day's highs.

Feeder cattle closed higher but off the day's highs of 27 to 20 points over Friday. The close was 10 to 20 pointsup in bearbys on volume of 487 contracts.

Live hogs closed 50 to 20 points up in nearbys and up 17 to down 2 in deferreds on a trade of 4,814 contracts. Profit taking shaved earlier gains. Pork bellies closed 30 to 62 points up, although below earlier 85 to 67 point gains, on volume of 5,036 contracts.

Wheat closed 1¾ cents to 2 cents higher after recovering from opening losses. Corn closed 1 to 1½ cents lower after trading in a range of 1¾ cents for the session, as drying weather and advancing harvest dominated the market. Hedge pressure was evident in soybeans, which closed 15½ to 12½ cents down while meal was off 4.30 to 3.20 and oil 22 points lower to 5 points higher.

New York Sugar 11 advanced on short covering, closing 14 to 21 points higher with most active March up 23 points at 8.30 cents. Volume was 6,000 lots.

Chicago Board of Trade silver closed 800 to 900 points higher after commission house buy stops were triggered in December, all the way to a session high of 4.714. New contract highs were set in April, June and August 1979.

International Monetary Market gold jumped 190 to 220 points in heavy trading placed at 4,820 contracts, with the weakening U.S. dollar and the August foreign trade deficit principal factors.

Pea harvest hit hard by drought

BOISE (UPI) — One sector of Idaho agriculture hard hit by the drought is the pea and lentil harvest, according to Harold Blaine, executive director of the Idaho Pea and Lentil Commission.

The reduced pea and lentil crops may cost Idaho farmers as much as $10,000,000 in lost income, Blaine said. The pea production this year will be the lowest since 1949, according to the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service in Boise.

The pea crop is down 60 per cent this year and the lentil crop is off 80 per cent. Usually Idaho and Washington provide almost all of the United States crop in the two commodities with 60 per cent of the crop going for export.

"This year's crop doesn't leave much available for export," Blaine said.

The pea and lentil crop is concentrated in northern Idaho and therefore the impact of the poor harvest affects that area most. Last year peas and lentils were $28,000,000 crop in Idaho. Blaine estimates a possible $10,000,000 loss to farmers this year.

It would be worse except that the poor crop has led to increased prices for what will be harvested. Blaine said peas are selling for $18 per hundred weight right now compared to $12 a year ago. Lentils are selling at $43 compared to $18 a year ago.

Market effort pushed

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Washington Wheat Commission has decided to use reserve funds to allow three programs dealing with market development and research to continue.

Commission Administrator Scott Hanson said a $137,000 deficit because of the poor 1977 harvest necessitated the action.

Major Hoople's

Old boy himself

Look out! Hoople's back in the groove

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE
(Peerless Predictor)

Um, yas! I feel it coming back now.

After two miserable weeks readjusting my clairvoyance into the realm of the gridiron, I have raised my percentage of success to 75.

Surely not in the class yet of some of you Magic Valley experts, but at least a definite indication of things to come. Harrumph!

On that note let us pay homage to Brian Crawford of Buhl who not only booted a couple of extra points to help the Indians beat Jerome last week but also found time to correctly select 18 of the 20 games offered for consideration.

A stunning show, to be sure. But whether Crawford picked Buhl or Jerome will remain a secret between myself and Crawford. (Ed's note: Nice ploy, Major).

Second place was a tie-breaker duel between Larry McMurdie of Burley and Vi Smith of Twin Falls. McMurdie came out the victor on the basis of point selection. For that he will receive $5 while Mrs. Smith picks up the third prize of $2.50.

Honorable mentions for the week go to Keith Ferrell, Twin Falls; Paul Ross, Eden; Tom Stephan, Twin Falls; Steve Farnsworth, Filer; Mark Munroe, Buhl; Mardo Eaton, Twin Falls, and David Perkins, Twin Falls.

This week's slate doesn't appear as threatening as usual. Largely because it appears that most of the teams are beginning conference play and we are without the great intersectional matchups.

Cleveland edges Patriots 30-27 in overtime thriller

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Don Cockroft booted a 35-yard field goal at 10:15 into overtime Monday night to give the Cleveland Browns a 30-27 victory over the New England Patriots.

It was the Browns' first overtime victory ever.

Crockroft earlier had booted a pair of 37-yard field goals, the last one giving the Browns a 27-24 lead over the Patriots with 55 seconds left in regulation time.

But New England's John Smith kicked a 34-yard field goal with no time remaining to tie the game 27-27. The Patriots moved 81 yards in seven plays, including a key third-down pass from Steve Grogan to Russ Francis for 28 yards to the Cleveland 17 with one second left.

The Browns had gone ahead after linebacker Charlie Hall intercepted a Steve Grogan pass intended for tight end Francis with 2:11 in the regulation time. Hall snagged the ball at the New England 30 and was tackled at the 27. Cockroft followed with a 37-yard field to give the Browns a short-lived 27-24 lead.

Brian Sipe connected on 16-of-23 passes for 165 yards and two touchdowns in regulation and Grogan completed 15-of-23 for 172 yards and two TDs.

The Browns' first touchdown came in the first quarter on a 5-yard pass from scatback Greg Pruitt to running back Brian Duncan. The other Cleveland tally came on a 26-yard pass from Sipe to Gary Parris with 7:20 left in the third period to bring the Browns within 17-14.

The Patriots took a 17-7 halftime lead on a 8-yard TD pass from Grogan to Sam Cunningham and a 2-yard plunge by fullback Don Calhoun. Smith later added a 35yard field goal.

With 11:18 left in the third period the Patriots were called for offensive pass interference when Thom Darden broke up a Grogan pass intended for Francis. The Patriots were assessed a penalty, placing the ball on the Browns' 46. On the following play Cleveland was called for an illegal formation. Three seconds later the Browns' Mike St.Clair sacked Grogan on the Patriots' 40.

After a punt, Sipe hit Parris with a 26-yard TD pass to move the Browns to within 17-14 with just over seven minutes left in the third period, ending a sixplay, 54-yard drive.

After the touchdown, the Browns kicked off and Larry Poole caused a fumble by Raymond Clayborn which was recovered by Cleveland's Rickey Feacher on the Patriots' 25. On the next play Pruitt went wide right on an option pass and hit Reggie Rucker on a would-be TD but Rucker was out of the end zone by five yards.

New England grabbed a 17-7 halftime lead on an 8-yard pass from Grogan to fullback Sam Cunningham, a 2-yard plunge by fullback Don Calhoun and a 35-yard field goal by Smith. The Browns' scoring was on a 5yard pass from Pruitt to running back Brian Duncan.

Ali promises to shine Shavers' head Thursday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rain washed out Monday's public workout by heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali — but not his mouth.

"I'm gonna kick his butt on Sept. 29," Ali screamed at challenger Earnie Shavers, whom he meets in a title defense at Madison Square Garden.

"Moses was a miracle man and so am I," Ali warmed up. "He walked through the water, I walked over Sonny Liston, George Foreman and Joe Frazier."

Ali, whose punches are more accurate than his Biblical history, added that "after Moses opened the sea, it rained for 40 days . . . or whatever."

A television audience of about 56 million viewers is expected for the 15-round bout between the 35-year-old Ali and Shavers, reputed to have boxing's most devastating punch.

Shavers, from Warren, Ohio, has a record of 52 knockouts among 54 victories and an apparent loathing for Ali's lip.

"Ali is my ticket out of the ghetto," said Shavers, rubbing his billiard ball-smooth scalp. "He doesn't know what it is to live in a ghetto." Then, waving to the crowd at Rockefeller Plaza, yelled: "Thanks for the encouragement, brothers. Come to the fight."

Shavers predicted he would knock out Ali in the sixth or seventh round and then make his first title defense against Jimmy Young, "because he's a good fighter."

"I don't want Ali to have a heart attack between now and the fight. If he shows, I'll knock him out. I'll keep hitting him with my best punches and sooner or later he'll fall down."

The ever-clowning Ali, who carries a career record of 54 victories and two losses into his 19th title defense, said he'll retire as the only black heavyweight champion, but refused to indicate when he'd leave the ring.

"Right now, I'm the true heavyweight champion of the world," he told a luncheon gathering. "I'm the most talked about, fastest, prettiest and the oldest dancing master. Most people don't realize how great I am. But they'll find out for good when I knock Earnie Shavers. I'll be doing my shuffle. My rope-a-dope will wear him out. He'll run out of gas and then I'll kick his butt.

"I'm also humble," Ali began to add, but somebody from the audience yelled "time," which stopped the champ momentarily.

"If Shavers has dreams of taking the heavyweight title away from me, I'll wake him up," Ali continued quickly. "I'm gonna shine his head in the first round."

California officials say LA games won't cost state

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. and Mayor Tom Bradley say they meant what they said when they promised to produce the first money-making Olympics since 1932, when Los Angeles last hosted the summer athletic festival.

But the two officials, who flew home together in triumph after the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision Sunday to nominate Los Angeles to host the 1984 games, also said they did not want to place too much emphasis on the economic aspects.

"We've won the right to compete for the greatest goodwill event on earth," Bradley said, alluding to next year's decision by the International Olympic Committee.

"I'm positively elated."

Los Angeles, which returned a $1 million games' profit during the Depression, is favored to get a chance to duplicate that feat seven years from now, since no other city has yet asked for the right to host the 1984 games.

"Boy, am I happy!" exclaimed Brown, who made a last-minute trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., to bolster Los Angeles' bid against stiff competition from New York.

"So long as the proposal is sound," Brown added, "the real focus ought to be on the athletes and individual competitions and the commitment to excellence.

"It is not just something to make businessmen a few extra profits. This is an opportunity for individual athletes around this planet to compete in a spirit of honor and competition; and whether it has any impact or not on the business climate is really irrelevant."

Brown, who earlier promised full support for the Los Angeles bid but later expressed some hesitancy, said he reviewed the plan for its economic and environmental impact before agreeing to back it forcefully.

He concluded that the city had "a sound proposal, backed up by the commitment of the private sector, to serve the athletes and ultimately the spirit of honest, open and healthy competition."

The governor said he was also convinced there would be "no environmental problems resulting from the games."

Bradley and other officials indicated that the "economic realism" of the Los Angeles bid was most responsible for the city's selection over New York by a 55-39 vote.

New York put together an elaborate campaign costing $400,000 and proposed a budget including a $252.5 million deficit. Los Angeles, by contrast, spent only $30,000 to bid with a spartan budget of $184.2 million in revenue offsetting $183.5 million in expenditures.

CSI rodeo team wins

TWIN FALLS — The boys rodeo team from the College of Southern Idaho took first place and the girls were second at the Rocky Mountain Regional rodeo at Brigham Young University last weekend.

Shawn Davis, advisor and rodeo coach at CSI said the CSI teams competed with contenstants from all major colleges in the Rocky Mountain Region.

Individual team members from CSI each placed in special events. Rye Brower earned the most points by winning both go rounds in the bareback riding events, riding a horse owned by Swanee Kirby, Salt Lake City producer, which had competed in the national professional rodeo finals last year.

Second high individual was Shane Prescott, who earned 80 points in the bull riding. Philinda Gose was second in barrel racing and fourth in breakaway roping.

They were the highest point individuals on the CSI team, which finished second to BYU.

Charioteers round up

JEROME — The Snake River Chariot Racing Association will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Jerome Livestock Producers Association.

The meeting is being called to prepare delegates for a district meeting Oct. 3 in Pocatello and the chariot horse auction in Pocatello Oct. 8.

George Juker, Buhl, says all members are urged to attend. Also anyone interested in chariot racing or with a team to enter in the races is welcome to attend. He says the group is always ready and willing to talk to team owners or new members

Get elk tags today

TWIN FALLS — The Department of Fish and Game reports midnight tonight will be the deadline for buying elk tags anywhere in Idaho. The sale of deer tags will also end today in Idaho County and all counties northward.

Southern Idaho deer hunters will have until October 11 to buy tags. Department offices will remain open for deer and elk tag selling until midnight on both cutoff dates.

The department reports its quota of Panhandle elk tags has been sold. The number of Panhandle tags available was 1,200 to nonresidents, 12,000 to residents.

The Panhandle tag allows hunters to hunt in game management units 1 through 7 and Unit 9. The tags cannot be used to hunt in other parts of the state. Hunters with regular elk tags (still available) cannot hunt in the Panhandle units, the department reports.

Cardiac Bobcats age coaches

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Bobcat coach Larry Finley can hardly wait for his team's next game. Really.

It doesn't bother him that his cardiac kids are aging his heart "rapidly", or that he feels "about 140 (years old) right now." The Bobcats are winning with the kind of play that sends fans into delirium and coaches into early retirement.

In four games this year they have tied one and won three by a total of four points. Last week Mountain Home was the one point victim, by a 16-15 score.

The routine heart-stopper came in the fourth quarter after Burley had rallied from a 9-0 deficit to a 16-9 lead. Mountain Home got the ball and scored for 16-15.

They went for the win with a two-point conversion, and the Bobcats made the big play to preserve the win.

The week before was the 14-14 tie with Rigby. Rigby saved Finley further palpitations by refusing to play overtime, but the game couldn't have been any tighter.

Before that it was Minico who got scalded in a 15-13 pressure-cooker, and in the season opener Bonneville rolled up 300-plus yards against the Bobcats but couldn't punch the ball in from 25 yards out in the last two minutes against the clutch Burley defense. Burley won 20-19.

It's gotten to the point where Finley doesn't mind falling behind because, he swears, "We expect to pull out and win. They (the players) have confidence in each other, and I have confidence in them."

It all started in last year's Caldwell game, Finley explains, which the Bobcats lost badly. But in that game they realized that they could hit with anybody.

Many of the players from last year's team are back this year, and they have developed the poise that only comes when players trust each other to get the job done.

The Bobcats appear to have crossed that undefinable attitude-line that separates the winners from the losers. When they walk on the field, they know they can do what they have to do to win. They're thinking win, not loss.

On offense, the team has the patience to take what the defense is giving up.

Quarterbacks Gordon Kerbs and Kelly Davis have been able to hit tight end Ray Hurst, split end Jeff Kerbs and flanker DeLon Jones with regularity, and when the defenses hang back to stop the pass, the line has been able to open the routes Doug Brown needs to pack the mail.

The defense, though small (152-pounds per man on the line), has been able to out-quick the opposition, penetrating into the backfield often enough to force an average of 5-6 turnovers per game.

Confidence is one thing, but over confidence has lost many a football game. Finley says his kids don't have that problem, and they're not looking past this week's opponent, Madison, even though Madison is 0-4.

Finley says Madison's worst loss was to Shelley 14-0, and Shelley shut out three teams in a row.

The Bobcats may be taking things one game at a time, but Finley would probably appreciate it if the Wildcats would win by more than one point at a time.

Whatever happened to Oakland's A's?

By DAVE NIGHTINGALE
© Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — It's a lot of fun being a member of the Oakland A's these days. About as much fun as trying to set an underwater swimming record in the Chicago Sag Canal.

Ah, the Oakland A's! Once-proud wearers of the Kelly green and Fort Knox gold and wedding-gown white, three-time champions of the baseball universe only a few short years ago. And now a team that finds:

—Its owner, Charles Oscar Finley, recuperating from a coronary bypass operation at Chicago's Northwestern Memorial Hospital, stitched from head to toe.

—Its chances of finishing ahead of the expansionist Seattle Mariners (and out of the cellar) only slightly better than 50-50.

—It's 1977 season attendance still shy of the coveted half-million mark.

—Its viable future in Oakland very much in doubt.

—Its roster populated with a few has-beens and a few never-weres, but mainly with a collection of bewildered children of Triple-A ability who don't have the foggiest notion of what major league ball is all about.

Or, as former Oakland employe James Piersall analyzed it Tuesday night, for the edification of the White Sox radio network: "The worst ball club I've every seen." (Which is saying a lot, considering Piersall's well-documented views of the Milwaukee Brewers as contenders for that honor.)

The ringmaster for this circus is a classy gent named Bobby Winkles, who previously majored in baseball diamonds at Arizona State University and the Anaheim Angels.

He is the 13th of his ilk employed by Finley in the last 17 years, having followed Joe Gordan, Hank Bauer (twice), Eddie Lopat, Mel McGaha, Haywood Sullivan, Alvin Dark (twice), Luke Appling, Bob Kennedy, John McNamara, Dick Williams, Chuck Tanner and Jack McKeon to the throne.

Next year, a 14th name will be added to the list and Winkles knows it.

But for now, he can do little more than make out the lineup card and pretend the bags under his eyes do not exist. "I have my health; I have a job and my family still loves me, contrary to what some people think," he said.

It is late afternoon before Winkles sends the A's out onto the Comiskey Park greensward (where they will commit seven errors and lose to the White Sox 8-2), and the manager has just returned from a visit to the hospital room of the owner.

"I don't think the operation has taken too much out of Charlie," said Sinkles. "During our one-hour conversation, he seemed pretty chipper to me, everything considered."

"Yeah," interjected Monte Moore, Finley's long-time radio announcer. "One thing the doctor didn't cut out of Charlie was his 'disposition nerve.' With all of that time to rest, he's really gonna be looking for some ass to chew."

"Well, at least he didn't chew mine," declared Winkles. "He was very pleasant with me during our conversation."

"The pleasant conversations" are a rarity with the A's these days. Among the topics that don't qualify are:

—Richie Allen, the vagabond slugger, who was relieved of his uniform in mid-season because of a desire to shower during ball games and a lack of desire to hit against anybody who didn't pitch with his left hand. ("The Allen situation mystified our kids; they just didn't know what to make of it," said Winkles.)

—Vida Blue, the team's only registered superstar, who has pitched with less verve than a robot during the past season and a half, after signing a three-year Finley contract in 1976 under the misguided notion that it would be his passport to the New York Yankees. (For the most part, Blue suffers in silence — as the kids kick the ball around behind him. Why shoot a dead horse? "I don't suppose Vida is very happy these days," conceded pitching coach Lee Stange. "But he hasn't caused much of a stir.")

Bill North, another bona fide major leaguer, who currently is sitting on the bench — awaiting a trade, he hopes — because some of his verbiage about his teammates' ineptitudes found its way into print.

—Wayne Gross, the young third baseman, who, according to Finley, was "going to make everyone forget about Sal Bando," whom Finley allowed to drift in the draft. ("In Wayne's defense, he played hurt a lot this year. But I'm afraid he couldn't handle the second time around the league," said Winkles, referring to the traditional rookie stumbling block. "No, his numbers will not be better than Bando's this year.")

The manager, however, was more than pleased to discuss his kid left fielder Mitchell Page. Mitchell said he should be the American League rookie of the year. Winkles agreed: "He dropped 60 points the second time around, but he fought his way back; he'll wind up the year with a .300 average, 80 RBIs and 40 stolen bases. No other kid in the league has those numbers."

But then it was game time, and Winkles had to put a team on the field that did not have eight other kids with "those numbers." He scanned the lineup card carefully, before handing it to Stange. He took another look at his designated hitter: ex-Cub Jerry Tabb, .217 batting average.

"Have I forgotten someone?" he asked Stange. "Do we have a better designated hitter for tonight than Tabb?"

"No," said Stange. And that said it all.

Yanks win, near title — Cubs stall Philly party

By United Press International

Thurman Munson singled in the decisive run in the fourth inning and Sparky Lyle pitched three shutout innings in his 69th relief appearance of the season Monday night, leading the New York Yankees to a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Yankees' fourth straight win gave them a 3½-game lead over the Boston Red Sox and a four-game lead over the Baltimore Orioles and reduced their magic number for clinching the American League East title to four. Baltimore was idle Monday while Boston was rained out at home against Toronto.

Munson delivered the gamewinning hit with two out in the fourth after Bucky Dent reached first on an infield single and stole second base. Loser Don Hood struck out Willie Randolph and Craig Nettles but Munson then singled through the left side of the infield to drive in Dent.

Mike Torrez went six innings and received credit for his 17th victory with Lyle taking over at the start of the seventh. Lyle allowed a walk in the seventh and a double by Rico Carty in the eighth but went on to earn his 29th save.

Elsewhere, Larry Bittner pounded out four hits, including his 12th homer, to help the Chicago Cubs stall Philadelphia's National League East clinching with a 10-7 victory over the Phillies. The loss kept the Phillies' magic number at one. Bobby Murcer and Greg Gross also homered for Chicago.

Gary Carter drove in five runs with a three-run homer in the seventh inning and a two-run single during in a four-run ninth to stake the Montreal Expos to a 9-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jeff Burroughs and Gary Matthews smashed seventh-inning home runs to snap a 10-10 tie and lift the Atlanta Braves to a 12-10 victory over the Houston Astros. Burroughs led off the inning with his 41st homer off losing Houston reliever Dan Larson to snap a 10-10 tie. One out later, Matthews belted his second homer of the game and 17th this season to give the Braves an insurance run.

Joe Coleman spaced five hits while Mike Jorgensen and Jeff Newman hit homers to help the Oakland A's snap Kansas City's eight-game winning streak with a 7-1 triumph over the Royals. Jorgensen broke a 1-1 by leading off the fourth with his fifth home run off Kansas City starter and loser Jim Colborn, 18-14.

Willie McCovey smashed his 492nd career home run on a night in his own honor and Gary Thomasson drove in four other runs with a homer, double and single to stake the San Francisco Giants to a 9-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers behind the six-hit pitching of Ed Halicki. Halicki, 15-12, contributed his second home run of the season to his own cause in the eighth inning.

Honored in pre-game ceremonies at Dodger Stadium for his long and distinguished career, the 39-year old McCovey belted his 27th homer of the year, a two-run shot off loser Rick Rhoden, 16-10, to cap a threerun Giants' seventh. McCovey also singled and walked twice.

US tennis group refuses to ban apartheid country players

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — The president of the U.S. Tennis Association says the organization will resist pressure by some groups to ban South African and Rhodesian players from tournaments because of the apartheid policies of the countries they represent.

"We have no objection to their picketing," W.E. "Slew" Hester said, "but we must continue to maintain our principles established in our by-laws that all of our tournaments are open to every qualified person regardless of race, color, creed or national origin."

Hester's comment was in response to questioning about demonstrations at this year's U.S. Open by a group called American Co-ordinating Committee for Equality in Sport and Society. The group of about 100 demonstrators caused no disturbances, but passed out leaflets to fans and carried banners with such phrases as "Apartheid's a Menace to the Future of Tennis" and "Sports for the People: Close the Open to Apartheid."

Hester said at the time the USTA deplored the racial policies of South Africa and Rhodesia but that players from those countries would continue to play in the sanctioned tournaments.

The 64-year-old Mississippian said he met with representatives of ACCESS three weeks prior to the U.S. Open and was told, "they were going to picket if we didn't take out all South Africans and Rhodesians.

"I told them it was impossible for us to violate our rules to please them and that we felt it would be a violation of the civil rights and human rights of the people that we would take out," he said.

Hester said he has discussed the issue with the South African and Rhodesian players and found, "They are all — and it's acknowledged by ACCESS — very anti-apartheid to a person.

"But there's nothing they can do," he continued. "The South African Tennis Federation, which is the white tennis federation, is very much anti-apartheid. They have gone farther than any sport in South Africa to break down racial barriers both in play, in seating-and-in-use-of-facilities in clubs and stadiums. But they do not go far enough for the action groups in this country and there's nothing we can do about it.

"We must maintain our position in our country and in our association," Hester said. "The only thing we look at is whether a tennis player is qualified by reasonable ability to play."

The official said he thinks demonstrations by groups such as ACCESS probably would continue but he said such protests had not created a "problem as such" for the USTA.

"We had a much more violent demonstration at Newport Beach, where we played the South African Davis Cup team," he said. "They had about 200 people outside chanting and we had 7,000 people inside cheering.

"It's unfortunate. I don't think these types of movements do any good for South Africa or help the anti-apartheid movement," Hester said. "But it's their business if they think it does.

"Until our rules are changed and until the rules of the Davis Cup and ITF (International Tennis Federation) are changed, we must play who we draw in the draw. We have been forceful in seeing that these rules have been put in to keep people from defaulting for political purposes. Therefore, we must maintain our stand and play," he said.

Pistons abandon Detroit

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The Detroit Pistons, saying they're "not moving out, just following a pattern of growth," signed a contract Monday to move to the Pontiac Silverdome to play basketball in 1978 after 21 seasons in Detroit.

The five-year lease the Pistons signed takes effect July 1, 1978, and gives the National Basketball Association team a five-year option to renew at the same terms when it runs out.

"We're not moving out," General Manager Bob Kauffman said. "We're just following a pattern of growth. We're doing it for our season ticket holders, we're not necessarily abandoning downtown."

Listed capacity for the new facility is 22,532 but the Pistons could pack in 30,000 or more fans for a single game. Detroit averaged some 7,400 fans last season in 11,000-seat Dobo Arena.

The Pistons rented the University of Detroit's basketball floor, moved it and reassembled it on the site where the Detroit Lions defeated the New Orleans Saints, 23-19, less than 24 hours earlier.

The floor is nestled in a corner of the end zone and the empty half of the stadium will be curtained off to reduce the feeling of vastness. A carpet will be rolled over the artificial turf to keep it from being damaged.

Twenty rows of portable theater-type high-rise seats will line one side and one end of the court. Ticket prices will range from $8 to $1.75 for general admission. Parking will cost $1 per game for season ticket holders and $1.50 for purchasers of individual game tickets.

The Silverdome must guarantee the Pistons a floor temperature of 70 degrees. I system of electrical cables for radiant heat has been installed under the six-inch asphalt floor and improvements in the air-heating blower system are planned.

"We gave it a fair shot," said Oscar Feldman, an attorney who is part owner of the team and formerly was its general manager. "I keep repeating it to the point of nausea.

"Here we are in the sixth largest city in the country, we've got a representative, exciting basketball team — and last season we're 20th of the 24 teams in terms of attendance.

"I don't view it as moving out," Feldman said. "We're still serving metropolitan Detroit. We're a Michigan-oriented team. But we'll keep the name, 'Detroit Pistons.'"

Nielsen named top WAC attacker

DENVER (UPI) — Brigham Young University quarterback Gifford Nielsen, who threw 30 passes for 321 yards and six touchdowns in a 65-6 rout over Utah State last week, was named Western Athletic Conference offensive player of the week Monday.

During 2½ quarters of play, Nielsen hit 30 of 40 passes. In two games, he has played only five quarters, but has passed for 639 yards and eight touchdowns.

In the Utah State game, Nielsen threw a 33-yard touchdown pass on BYU's first possession. The game was only 46 seconds old. He ended the first quarter by completing 13 of 15 pass attempts for 165 yards and three touchdowns.

Neilsen now has amassed 5,302 yards in passing for his career, topping BYU's Virgil Carter who had 5,125 yards. He ranks second on WAC career charts.

He also has completed 374 passes, surpassing a school and conference mark held by former Cougar Gary Sheide at 358. Nielsen needs only 630 yards to become the WAC's alltime passing leader, a record now held by former Arizona State star Danny White.

"This was his finest moment," BYU coach LaVell Edwards said after the Utah State game.

Other WAC players nominated for the honor included three players from Arizona State, which defeated Oregon State 33-31 Saturday on a 41-yard field goal by Steve Hicks with 39 seconds left to play. Nominated were Hicks, quarterback Dennis Sproul, who connected on 17 of 31 passes for two touchdowns and 252 yards, and John Jefferson, who caught seven passes for 151 yards and scored twice.

Also nominated were: Ron Beyer, Arizona tight end, who caught three passes for 41 yards in a 41-7 win at Iowa; Steve Anderson, a Colorado State guard who was graded as the top blocker.

Good steelhead season forecast

BOISE — The Department of Fish and Game projected today a good steelhead fishing season coming up.

Dave Ortmann, anadromous fisheries supervisor, said steelhead are moving over Ice Harbor Dam, the last dam before entering Idaho, at a rate of more than 1,000 per day, and anglers can expect larger fish this year.

A temperature problem in the Columbia and Snake rivers has dissipated and is no longer delaying the run, Ortmann said. The temperature block formed during hot, dry weather earlier in the summer.

The steelhead season will open in the Snake River and in the Salmon River from its mouth to the mouth of Redfish Lake Creek on October 1. The lower Clearwater River opens to steelhead fishing October 17 after a catch-and-release season ends there.

Ortmann said the bag limit will be one steelhead, possession limit will be two fish and the season limit will be three fish.

Steelhead regulations are available at the department offices around the state and at license vendors.

Basics win games

KIMBERLY — A last minute reversion to basic form ordered by coach Jean Emerson saved Kimberly from the jaws of defeat, and they went on to salvage an 8-15, 15-12, 15-2 volleyball victory over Shoshone Monday night.

Throughout the first two games the Bulldogs were overpowering their serves. After losing the first game and falling behind 4-12 in the second, coach Emerson stepped in and ordered her team to go back to the underhand method of serving.

The Bulldogs immediately began to get their serves in, and the momentum shifted. The score tells the rest.

The Kimberly JV's also whipped the Indians 15-6, 13-15, 15-10.

Valley rips Murtaugh

EDEN-HAZELTON — The spiking of 5'10" Lori Henry and repeated service aces powered the Valley Vikings to a 15-10, 15-7 volleyball victory over Murtaugh Monday night.

The Valley JV's completed the sweep by ripping Murtaugh 15-7, 15-8.

Mets pick up Doc Medich

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Mets Monday obtained right-handed pitcher George "Doc" Medich from the Seattle Mariners for the $20,000 waiver price.

Medich, who broke into baseball with the New York Yankees in 1973, was 1-0 at Seattle after compiling an 11-6 mark with Oakland. The A's obtained Medich from Pittsburgh in a nine-player spring training deal after he was 8-11 with the Pirates last season.

Medich, who is still unsigned, is expected to join the Mets for their upcoming series in Pittsburgh. He is expected to start a game this week. The Mets made room on their 40-man roster for the 6-foot-5, 227-pound right-hander by outrighting infielder Randy Trapp to Jackson of the Texas League.

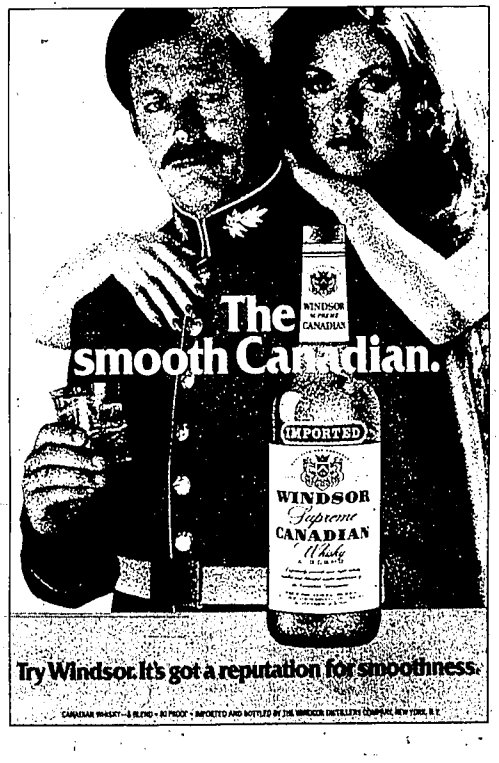

Seattle QB injures knee

SEATTLE (UPI) — Jim Zorn, quarterback for the Seattle Seahawks, may be out of action for three weeks because of a knee injury suffered in Sunday's 42-20 loss to Cincinnati.

Dr. Ivar W. "Buzz" Birkeland, team physician, described Zorn's injury as a "partial tear of the medial collateral ligament of the left knee."

Dr. Birkeland added, "he probably will be out three weeks, but he could get back sooner. It just depends upon his rehabilitation."

The beautiful Alps can be treacherous

By MARGARET STUDER
© Chicago Daily News

ZURICH, Switzerland — For Robert McClure of Jackson, Wyo., it was to be a grand adventure — climbing to the top of the Matterhorn and skiing down the perilous east flank. His home-town buddy Glen Warran was to record the spectacular event on camera.

But the boys back home never got to see this daring summer holiday film because 600 feet from the top, the two Americans slipped and fell. McClure's smashed body was found 4,000 feet below, and Warren's body has not been recovered.

The 14,690-foot Matterhorn claims such victims every year. On the same day this summer that the two Wyoming adventurers died, a Swedish climber slid and fell 1,200 feet to his death. Locals say strangers underestimate the world's most beautiful mountain. The "Horn," as they call it, is so attractive that people often are blind to the mountain's dangers and treachery.

The same could be said of many European peak. So far this year, more than 300 people have been killed in Alpine climbing accidents: An estimated 84 in France (a record for that country), 41 in Austria, 110 in Italy, 25 in Germany and 48 in Switzerland. Since the season will not end until mid-October, many more deaths are expected.

Why so many killed? The answer is simple: Alpine mountain climbing is one of the world's most dangerous sports.

Breaking rocks, falling stones, avalanches, glacier rifts — all bring sudden danger. Rapidly changing weather unexpectedly can cause lethal snowstorms or dense fog. On the Matterhorn, for instance, bad weather can hit with only half an hour's warning.

No one of these factors is responsible for this year's high fatalities. All have played a part, but weather certainly has been the most significant element for two reasons:

— It takes a very experienced mountain climber aware of local conditions to predict weather moods, and this year climatic conditions were particularly uncertain. Climbers used to steadier weather in their own part of the world found themselves stranded all over the Alps in uncontrollable situations.

— Europe's bad summer drought quickly melted late snowfalls that covered the usually hard snow surface. This made it difficult for climbing hooks to grip, thus all too frequently leading to catastrophe.

To such nature-caused dangers must be added a psychological problem that crops up every year. People tend to overestimate their capacities, and inflated ambition often brings tragedy.

Even the most experienced can fall in the mountains. French guide Jean Brunel and well-known Austrian mountain climber Gerhard Mayer both died climbing last month. Herbert Maeder writes in "Mountains of Switzerland": "I remember good friends who climbed with me and now no longer live because the mountain was stronger than they. The contention that mountain climbing is not dangerous is self-deception."

Yet each season droves of inexperienced, ill-equipped climbers tackle Alpine peaks. More often than not it is luck that brings them through. Veteran mountaineers mutter about the evils of mass tourism and long for "the good, old days, when a cheap air ticket did not buy you the Alps."

Impulse climbers are a real problem. These are people who go up the mountain by cable car and think it must be as easy to climb down as it was to go up. So they set off in their casual summer togs for a journey down on foot. They end up having to be rescued by helicopter.

In the soft light of mountain huts, old hands tell tales of thoughtless ventures, such as the five Germans who set off last April to climb the Breithorn (more than 12,000 feet). In normal weather it is not too difficult a challenge, but on that day a storm was brewing, and the Swiss told them not to go.

Hours later their frozen bodies were found. They had lost their way in the blinding snow. Unversed in mountain know-how, the men had made no attempt to save themselves by huddling together or digging a snow hole.

Too many climbers think they can get along without a guide. The day after the two Wyoming men were killed, dozens of climbers were back on the Matterhorn without guides; most had little knowledge of local conditions.

Such incidents have put pressure on Swiss authorities to regulate climbing. But, said Kurt Guenfgerich, Swiss Alpine Club rescue boss: "If the weather is good, you just cannot stop mountain tourism."

Besides, mountain climbing is one of the few inexpensive and red tape-free adventures left to office-bound man. The Swiss do not want to change that just because of a relatively small number of thoughtless offenders.

There would be more dead but for the Swiss flying rescue service, which is supported by small private contributions and fees charged to rescued climbers and skiers. Within 15 minutes of an accident on the Matterhorn, a rescue helicopter can be there.

"Active," holidays are a way of life in Switzerland. Men worried about their cholesterol level see more sense in climbing a mountain than sitting around a swimming pool. Tourist agencies stress the "need" for immobile city workers to breathe "pure" mountain air.

A Zurich professional woman pointed out: "I spent my holidays climbing all day and the nights in this cold mountain hut. I was completely exhausted at the end of the week. But I felt that I was back to nature, challenged by overcoming the mountain and my own weaknesses."

Each year about 250,000 people use the Swiss Alpine Club huts from which climbers set out to conquer the mountains. On a day when the weather is good, the Matterhorn alone can have as many as 200 aspirants, creating a veritable traffic jam.

From the popular Hoerni Hut it is a race to see who can start climbing the famous mountain first, for the leader sets his own pace and does not have to wait. There is no passing on the most frequented route up the Matterhorn.

The primitive huts with their large dormitories often are packed to overflowing. No one is sent away, though 200 people may have to be fitted in where there are only 100 beds.

Sleeping in shifts is common. Those going to the top get up before light and their beds are taken by young hitch-hikers — they are crossing the easier mountain passes on foot, and their day begins later.

The Bliemlsalp Hut manager, Lobrecht Mani, has grown fond of these young pass wanderers. "They come with those monstrous knapsacks and God knows what plunder they have in them," he said. "You really have to respect them, but what shoes some of the foreigners wear — casual Clarks and high boots."

Not so loved are the Delta flyers (hang gliders) who use the mountain as takeoff grounds for their bird-like contraptions. They are invading the Alps in increasing number as they seek more and more daring points from which to fly.

Recently three set off from the Solvay Hut to climb the Matterhorn and fly from its north wall. Weather conditions were poor — heavy wind and rain. Two survived. One crashed into the glacier below. He was the 10th Delta flyer to be killed in Switzerland this year.

Said a Swiss tourist center official: "Delta flying does not fall into our category of an 'active' holiday. Mountain climbing is a sport, Delta flying is not."

Nerve stimulator helps Sanders play with pain

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — The transcutaneous nerve stimulator (TNS) which permits Charlie Sanders to play tight end for the Detroit Lions once a week has been cleared for use through the National Football League offices, even though nobody knows how it works or what the legal ramifications are.

"We're aware of it," Jim Heffernan, director of public relations for the NFL, said Monday when asked if Commissioner Pete Rozelle had knowledge of and approved use of the electrical device.

"They brought it to our attention during the preseason," Heffernan said. "We find that it does not infringe with any of our competition rules in any way."

"The officials have looked into it," General Manager Russ Thomas of the Lions said. "Art McNally (NFL supervisor of officials) called and looked into it. We had him look into it and he cleared it."

The TNS is a battery operated device which transmits an electrical charge to the skin surface. Somehow — medical science has theories but no facts — the application of the charge at differing levels is able to reduce or eliminate the sensation of pain.

Neither the Lions, the league, nor Sanders can say exactly what the device does to the body other than give it an electrical charge. They also confess to not knowing the legal liabilities involved.

"You always run that exposure," Thomas said of the possibility of a player using the TNS today suing the club 10 years later for damage done because it sanctioned the use of the device.

"Today, who is to say they won't sue on anything?" Thomas said. "I don't believe it has that kind of powers."

Sanders caught two passes in Detroit's 23-19 win over New Orleans Sunday, the second being the 326th of his 10-year career to make him the leading pass receiver in Lions' history.

But even Sanders didn't know if he would have been able to play without the TNS taped to four points around the chronically pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg.

"That I can't answer," he said. "Pain is part of the game. This allows you to try to function with it.

"I don't think you could permanently hurt yourself. It isn't that kind of thing. There's only so much pain you can shut off."

"We look on it as the same thing as a healing device," Heffernan said. "We've gone with the recommendations of club officials and team trainers."

"It's like shots, pills, or physical equipment," Thomas said. "It's a preventative kind of thing.

"It's not like Novacaine," he said. "That's a liquid inserted into the system. This is just a surface thing."

Four wires lead from the plastic battery case, about the size of a deck of poker cards, to four objects about the size of quarters which are taped to the body.

Sanders had his taped to his leg at four spots surrounding the area of the muscle pull. Each had a dial which controlled the current level from "a slight buzz" to "a jolt."

What happens beyond that, nobody knows for sure.

Bruins seek cure for blocking woes

TWIN FALLS — Lately Bruin football coach Murray Johnson sometimes feels like buying a 1978 calendar and making 11 juniors into seniors."

That would solve a lot of problems for the inexperienced Bruins (Only three players who started a varsity game last year returned this year », Johnson said, because most of their problems so far this year have come because other teams have exploited this inexperience at key positions.

Twin has managed just seven points in three games so far this year and faces tough Idaho Falls and league-leading, number-one-ranked Boise in the next two weeks.

Johnson claims the Bruins' opponents have been changing their normal alignment for the Bruins, putting their bigger, stronger people head up on Twin's young, inexperienced people, especially in the offensive line.

Add to that the fact that the Bruins can't keep a tailback healthy for even one full game, and their I-formation offense is built around the tailback. In the opener, starting tailback David Skinner was injured. The following week, his replacement, Pat Allison, bit the dust. In the third game, Eddie Land drew the unlucky tailback chores, and got his reward, a painful trip to the sidelines, in the second half.

To fill the tailback gap, Johnson has had to raid the sophomore team, bringing up two backs to work out with the varsity in case they're needed.

With the top backs out, the running game has faltered. This has allowed opposing defenses to anticipate pass and tee off on the offensive line.

But against Idaho Falls Allison will be back, and the coaching staff is going to concentrate on blocking, even altering some of the assignments.

And though their backs might not be too healthy, the Bruin spirit is still intact.

"The team is hungry for a win, and they're working for it. They're fighting back and enjoying playing football," Johnson said, despite their grueling schedule.

Teams that become winners are teams that know what it is to lose, and Johnson figures his team is learning the hard lessons that will make them want to work as hard as they can to taste the fruits of victory.

NFL cornerbacks get no holidays

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — First it was Darryl Stingley...then it was Johnny Rodgers...and this week it's Fred Biletnikoff.

Rookie cornerback Gary Green of the Kansas City Chiefs isn't getting any rest as he goes through his indoctrination period in the National Football League.

"Every week it's somebody," said Green after holding the explosive Rodgers to just one catch for seven yards in Kansas City's 23-7 loss to San Diego last week.

The difference between the receivers in this league is very slight — they are all great athletes. One second of hesitation on my part and I lose. They all know where they want to run their patterns. My job is to force the receiver to go somewhere he doesn't want to go. Then I've won."

Green, the Chiefs' top pick out of Baylor and the No. 9 overall selection in the 1977 draft, was forced into a starting role in the season opener against New England when Tim Collier strained knee ligaments in the final exhibition game.

Stingley caught two passes over Green for 42 yards in that opener but the rookie acquitted himself against San Diego with one interception to match Rodgers' one reception. Green had a second interception called back because of a face mask penalty against a teammate.

"I'm satisfied with my performance thus far," said Green. "I'm still making a few mistakes. Sometimes I get caught out of position but so does everyone else in this league. I have the ability to stop whoever I cover on every play. But I'm still in a learning process. I have to refine my technique.

"Going up against a Johnny Rodgers or a Cliff Branch is a personal challenge. I want to be considered the best at my position not only by myself but also by those around me. Going up against these guys is the best way to learn how to play my position. You don't survive if you don't learn fast."

Green will be responsible for Super Bowl most valuable player Biletnikoff when the Chiefs play the Oakland Raiders in a nationally televised game Monday night.

Five TD catches earn end honors

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — In a preseason interview, Louisiana State coach Charlie McClendon said sophomore split end Carlos Carson showed "promise" as a receiver. It may have been the understatement of his coaching career.

"He's small but he's got great speed," McClendon said. "Once he gets the ball he flies."

Carson flew for five touchdowns in his first college varsity game in Tiger Stadium Saturday night, smashing conference and school records in the vanguard of a 77-0 rout of Rice. The scoring catches were of 22, 29, 63, 20 and 67 yards.

The performance earned Carson, a freshman from West Palm Beach, Fla., UPI honors as the Southeast Offensive Player of the Week.

The fleet six-foot, 175-pound receiver shattered two 27-year-old Southeast Conference records, tied two more SEC marks and set four new LSU records.

Carson's five touchdowns — his only receptions in the game — eclipsed the four-TD performances of Kentucky's Al Bruno in 1950 and Buck Martin of Georgia Tech in 1951. His 201 yardage total, for a 40.2 yard average reception, broke a mark set by Bucky Curtis of Vanderbilt in 1950.

More importantly to Carson it proved he finally had found the concentration that had eluded him in spring practice and the loss to Indiana a week earlier. He had controlled his eagerness to run before the ball was firmly in his grasp.

"I had a few problems," Carson said. "But I had a lot of help from a lot of people. They helped me build my confidence."

He heaped praise on other receivers, such as roommate Greg LaFleur and quarterbacks Steve Ensminger, who tossed four of the TDs, and David Woodley.

"I just happened to be out there," he said. "It was just one of those things."

Four of Carson's touchdowns came in the first 23 minutes of play. McClendon said that established the offense he had been seeking.

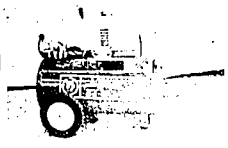

"We knew we had to get the ball to Carlos if we were going to have any kind of passing attack," he said. "We failed to do it against Indiana. That may be part of the reason we lost."

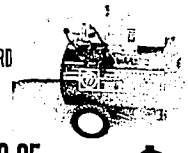

Carson is now looking forward to playing Florida in Tiger Stadium.

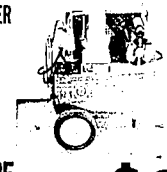

"I just hope I can do it again," he said. "I hope we can win like that this week. We are playing a fine team."

Carroll Righter

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 28, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime find you with poor judgment in making important decisions. After the sun goes down you are able to make long-range plans that will give you more abundance in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you have all the facts and figures before going ahead with a new project you have in mind. Follow the advice of an expert.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't postpone any work that has to be done even though it may be annoying. Obtain the data you need from the right sources.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Some social affair you are planning could give you headaches early in the day, but later it all works out to your advantage.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) An outside matter has you worried but do it to the best of your ability and it turns out just fine. Be astute.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have many new ideas which require study to know which are best to put in operation. An out-of-towner can do you a big favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Come to a better understanding with debtors and creditors and put your affairs in better order, strive for happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You could be at odds with others now and you must do something constructive to have harmony in the future. Show more patience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Attend to bothersome work early in the day and you'll have free time for more important matters later in the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan your time well so that after your work is done you'll have time for recreations. Build up your vitality.

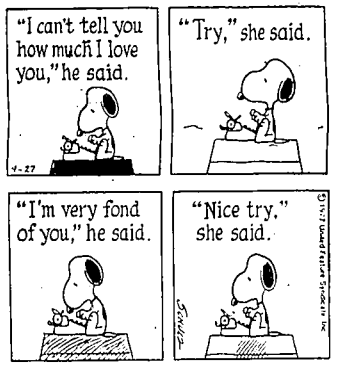

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Things may not seem to go right early in the day but later all spruces up and harmony reigns. Plan to have greater abundance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) An associate could prove too demanding and get you confused if you permit. Show increased affection for loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Talk to a financial expert and you solve a problem wisely. Make long-range plans to have greater abundance in the days ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . He or she will have innate abilities that may not manifest themselves unless you provide with a good education that will bring them to the fore. Give good religious training early in life and don't neglect sports to build up the body.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

Client asks our Love and War man if the latest studies indicate that a lot more husbands these days are cheating on their wives. No, evidently not. But a lot more young wives are cheating on their husbands, if the surveys are accurate. And a considerably larger number of teenage girls likewise now are known to be sampling that thing sometimes referred to as the extreme embrace.

Beautiful legs are not all that uncommon among women, actually. What's rare are beautiful hands. Or so contends a fashion photographer of some renown. Only one woman in 5,000, says he, is the possessor of what might be termed really beautiful hands.

INSTANT REPLAY

Q. "Why can't the big league baseball umpires look at TV's instant replays before making otherwise questionable decisions?"

A. The rulebook boys haven't come around to authorize that wrinkle yet. And it's not likely they will. It would certainly slow down the game. Besides, arguments continue after the replays, frequently. There was a time in baseball's early days when an umpire took testimony from both players and spectators before passing on doubtful plays. That didn't work, either.

Q. "Do birds ever decorate their nests just for the sake of making them look pretty?"

A. That, too, is open to argument. Some hawks and eagles always gussy up their nests with fresh green leaves which they replace whenever said leaves turn brown. They look dandy. But skeptics claim those leaves cool the nests and serve as camouflage, that they have nothing to do with decoration.

A TOAST

Who can help but feel a certain sympathy for 72-year-old Hendrick Van Rign of The Netherlands? He broke a leg when his wife Betty pushed him downstairs during their Golden Wedding anniversary party. All he'd done was propose a toast: "To our 50 glorious years together—the 49 for her and the one for me!"

Question arises as to exactly how many times in its life a crab shucks off its shell. Figure 15 times as typical. To grow bigger, it has to do that. It flexes. Off goes the shell. It inflates itself by maybe an inch more in width. Then it buries itself in the mud, gives off the secretion that hardens into a new shell, and crawls out into action again.

It's said to be bad luck to whistle aboard a naval ship, in a newspaper city room, in a theater dressing room. Client asks the why of these superstitions, if a why there be. Yes, there be. A why is behind most bad-luck superstitions, no? Whistling aboard ship can be confused with the piping orders. Whistling in a city room can distract writers on deadlines. Whistling backstage can break the concentration of the actors working on their lines.

London Skytrain takes first flight

GATWICK, England (UPI) — Freddie Laker's new discount "no frills" Skytrain zoomed off on its inaugural flight to New York Monday with 70 empty seats and opened a new round in the major airlines' battle for trans-Atlantic traffic.

The Laker Airways DC-10, which can carry 345 passengers, left Gatwick Airport five minutes behind schedule with 272 adults and three infants — plus Laker himself.

Some eager passengers had waited in line — unnecessarily, as it turned out — for as long as two days to make sure they got tickets, which were sold on a first-come, first served basis. Laker officials said about 200 were sold right after the ticket office opened at 4 a.m.

In New York, where people also had lined up for days for the Monday night return flight, a Laker spokesman said about 60 seats remained at midafternoon and these were being sold "in dribs and drabs."

The London-to-New York passengers paid $103 for their one-way ticket. The fare from New York to London is $135. The prices differ because of currency exchange rates.

Laker, who says he got the idea for Skytrain while taking a bath six years ago, predicted his new service would force major airlines to lower their fares not only across the Atlantic but around the world.

To prove his point, Laker said the other six airlines on the Atlantic route — Pan American, TWA, British Airways, El Al, Air India and Iran Air — already had been forced to bring in a new standby fare of $109 from London to New York.

(In Washington Monday, President Carter, overruling the Civil Aeronautics Board, approved an experimental $256 budget roundtrip fare between New York and London.)

Many of the passengers who stood in line for long hours to get Laker tickets in London said the new low fare was the only way they could make the trip.

"Every time I saved up enough for me and my wife and the three kids to go over, they upped the price," said Nate Francis, returning to New York after working two years in Britain.

"I have been trying to leave for a year and a half. I couldn't afford to go till now."

"I think a lot of kids who come over to Europe don't want to be restricted by dates," said Canadian John Marsh, 35, a teacher at Trent University. "This is great for them because they can come back when they like."

There are several differences between the no-frills skytrain service and the standby system operated by the other airlines.

Those airlines include the price of meals in the ticket whereas on the Skytrain the passenger pays an extra $3 for a hot meal — or brings his own.

But whereas the other airlines only have a limited number of standby seats, depending on how many they have empty at the time of departure, Laker will have 345 seats on sale every day at 4 a.m.

"Now I've come this far there is no way the other airlines are going to beat me," Laker said. "Their standby is just a passive imitation which won't last because with their high overheads they can't afford it."

Laker said he needed only a 64.8 per cent load factor (222 of the 345 seats sold) to make a profit.

Murder retrial gets continuance

MEDIA, Pa. (UPI) — The murder retrial of former United Mine Workers president W.A. "Tony" Boyle has been continued until January 16, 1978 because of Boyle's ill health.

Delaware County Judge Francis Catania granted the continuance today after hearing testimony in his chambers from cardiac physicians from the Crozer Chester Medical about Boyle's condition. Boyle was rushed to the hospital Sept. 19 from the courthouse, after complaining of chest pains.

Seven jurors had been selected to hear the case in which Boyle is charged in the 1969 slaying of his union rival Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter on New Year's Eve as they slept in their Clarksville, Pa. farmhouse.

The jurors were dismissed by Catania.

Boyle's retrial was to have resumed last Friday, but it was again postponed until today because the hospital said his heart beat had been irregular.

Kenneth Dale, a spokesman at Crozer-Chester Medical Center, said Boyle was a "little more restless" overnight Saturday, but his condition was still listed as stable.

Boyle, 76, has had a history of heart problems, but the diagnosis was not a heart attack. Doctors had said he had a "cardiac episode."

Boyle was convicted here in April, 1974, and sentenced to three life prison terms, but he won a new trial last January when the state Supreme Court ruled that Catania erred when he refused to allow testimony from a defense witness.

Mental defect plea given in Pocatello

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — A Pocatello man accused of murdering his mother and attacking a police officer will be ordered to undergo mental evaluation at the maximum security unit of the state penitentiary.

Kelly Thomas, 33, bound over to district court last week on charges of first degree murder and assault with a deadly weapon, Monday entered an oral plea of innocent by reason of mental defect.

Upon receipt of his written plea, District Judge Arthur Oliver said he will order the evaluation.

Thomas has been remanded back to the custody of the Bannock County Sheriff without bond pending transfer.

Two US men rescued

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet ship has rescued two Americans who crashed in a small plane in the open sea off South America, the Tass news agency reported Monday.

The Soviet agency said Maurilio Rodrigues and Roberto Buret were rescued by the ship "Novgorod" and taken to Trinidad. There was no report on their condition.

It said the two Americans had issued a distress signal and had been in the water for several hours.

The Tass story did not say when the incident occurred, only that the report was carried in a radio message from the Soviet ship Monday.
